Republicans at Albany Announce Legislative Plan

opose to Re-enact State Dry Law—Favor Sumbitting Amendments to Federal Constitution to People for Advisory Vote—Favor Elimination of Grade Crossings—Other Matters Considered.

Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 6.—With the 25 session of the State Legislature heduled to open tomorrow noon, e Republicans, who will be in mplete control of both houses, to- y made public the legislative pro- ram they will seek to carry out uring the next few months.

In some instances they have de- ded to pass measures recommended st year by Governor Alfred E. mith, but which were defeated at at time by the Republican as- mbly.

The committee which drafted the epublican program was composed f Lieutenant Governor Seymour owman, Senators John Knight, harles J. Hewitt, George R. earon; Assemblymen Joseph A. cGinnies, Simon L. Adler, Eberly utchinson and F. Trubee Davison; eorge K. Morris, Republican state hairman; Miss Sarah Schuyler Butr of New York and H. Edmund achold of Watertown, former peaker of the Assembly.

Organization of both the Senate nd Assembly will be completed at aucuses in the Capitol tonight.

Fight for Senate Leadership.

The fight between Senators eorge R. Fearon, of Syracuse and ohn Knight of Wyoming, for the epublican leadership of the upper ouse has developed into one of he hottest of its kind in years. here was every indication today, owever, that Senator Knight ould be the next majority leader. is friends insisted he had 17 votes ledged. Fifteen are necessary.

Assemblyman Joseph A. McGin- ies of Chautauqua, will be elected peaker of the Assembly to succeed . Edmund Machold of Watertown. imon L. Adler of Rochester, will e returned to the post of Repub- ican floor leader.

Governor Smith today asked the eaders of both houses to convene in oint session tomorrow noon so he ould read them his annual message. This will be the third time the governor has personally read his mes- age.

Session Short and Snappy.

Following the reading of the mes- age the lawmakers will recess until ext Monday night when the session vill really get under way. Predic- ions were freely made on all sides oday that the session would be hort and snappy.

While both houses will be in con- rol of the Republicans, it was pre- icted today at the capitol that Gov- rnor Smith and the Republican eaders would "get together" on sev- ral important measures before the ession adjourns.

The Republicans today were anxi- usly waiting to hear the governor's message read to see how it "squares" with their proposed legis- lative program.

Re-enact Dry Law.

Under the heading "Law and Or- ier," the Republicans, in their leg- slative program, said they would en- ct a state wide prohibition enforce- ment bill to take the place of the ld Mullan-Gage law, repealed two ears ago.

"We recognize the duty of the tate to assist in the enforcement of he Eighteenth Amendment and shall ropose necessary legislation to hat end," the statement said.

Regarding the executive budget he Republicans said they would en- ct a bill "which will give the gov- rnor all the facilities and powers ow possessed by the president un- ler the federal budget system." This budget system, however, is not he same as that proposed last year y Governor Smith and which he is xpected to again recommend this ear.

Simplify State Offices.

The Republicans said they favored he proposed constitutional amend- nent reducing the number of elect- re state officers from seven to four nd providing for twenty depart- nents in the state's government. This has been urged repeatedly by he governor.

They said they would like to see he state government conducted so would not be necessary to levy a irect state tax on real estate. They lso plan a survey of the state's fiscal ffairs "to ascertain if a reduction of he state income tax is possible." ast year at the request of the gov- rnor the income tax was reduced 5 per cent.

A forty-eight hour week for wo- nen and minors in industry will be upported by the Republicans. Gov- rnor Smith recommended such a aw for the last two years, but on ach occasion it was defeated by the epublican assembly.

Because of present delays in the ayment of compensation cases, the epublicans propose an immediate restigation to determine the facts. If the delays are caused by insuffi- ent and inadequate enforcement of isting law, we propose to do what e can to bring about better en- orcement," said the G. O. P. state- ent.

Submit Amendments to People.

Recommendation is made that the oposed child labor amendment to e federal constitution be submitted a vote of the people of the state.

"We believe," the statement said, "that all proposals to amend the federal constitution should be submitted to an advisory vote of the electorate before action is taken on the question of their adoption or rejection."

"We propose a vigorous prosecution of the state's claim to the power rights of our boundary streams," the statement said regarding water power development. "Until these rights and our control thereof have been determined, it is idle to continue the agitation as to how this power should be developed."

The state's federal suit to determine its claim over boundary waters was recently discontinued by former Attorney General Carl Sherman.

"We reaffirm our opposition to alienating the title to any power rights owned by the state," said the statement. "It is our intention that the future development of this power under state supervision shall secure the maximum benefits and the ownership thereof for all time to the people of the state."

They favor an immediate survey to "determine the proper method" of carrying on the work of reforestation to the fullest extent.

Eliminate Grade Crossings.

Recommendation is made that a joint legislative committee be created to "fix on a plan for protection or elimination of all railroad crossings at grade." The statement adds:

"The enormous loss of life by reason of grade crossing accidents makes it imperative that our public highways be made more safe for traffic."

The Republicans will work for a bill to give women equal participation with men in political party management. They also will urge a measure granting to the dependents of deceased World War service men the compensation to which they would have been entitled

Stratton, Out on Bail, Arrested

New York Police Want Man Who is Charged With Breaking in Stone Ridge Garage—Also Known as Flatow.

Oliver Stratton, alias Henry Flatow, who was out on bail, having been charged with breaking into the Bush garage at Stone Ridge, was placed under arrest by Patrolman Harry G. Layin, of the 42nd precinct, New York city, and Deputy Sheriff Ellsworth at Ashokan on Monday. Stratton, or Flatow, under which name he was known to the New York police, was arrested on a bench warrant charging him with breaking his parole in New York city, where he was indicted on August 16, 1922, and convicted in court of general sessions. He received a suspended sentence. He is charged with violation of his parole and grand larceny, second degree. A bigamy charge is also made against him. He was taken to New York city today and lodged in the Tombs prison.

HURLEY BOY HEAD OF ANTIOCH SCIENCE CLUB.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Yellow Springs, O., Dec. 31.—Robert E. Hiller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hiller of Hurley, has just been elected president of the Science Club of Antioch College, this town. Young Mr. Hiller's scientific interests are also shown by his holding the position of chemistry assistant at the college. In addition, he is a member of the student legislature at Antioch and plays on Antioch's baseball nine and basketball team.

Antioch College aims at thorough education. It divided the students into divisions A and B, which alternate in five week shifts between classroom and employment with more than two hundred firms. Publishers, schools, General Motors, John Wanamaker and the government air service appear on this long roll. Mr. Hiller, before becoming connected with the Antioch chemical laboratories, was employed in a Dayton machine shop.

YOUNG WOMEN WELCOME THE FREEMAN AT BERMUDA

A number of young women from the neighborhood of New Paltz, who are spending the winter months in Bermuda, have written to a friend in this city expressing their appreciation for a subscription of The Freeman which is being sent them. Not only among themselves but among visitors on the island who come from this vicinity is the paper a welcome arrival. As one of the girls expressed the matter in a letter, every time the ship arrives in port it is met with a lusty cheer for it brings The Freeman and news from home. Among other things in the letter the girls tell of noted visitors at the island and of seeing folks from "home."

GRAPE VINE INJURED EYE OF MARLBOROUGH MAN

Charles Grief of Marlborough while trimming grape vines in the vineyard of Charles Young had his eye injured when a vine struck him in the face with such force that the sight is endangered. He is under the care of a physician.

An Auto Collision.

A collision between the cars of C. E. Merwin of 194 Murray street and Coroner W. Norman Conner of Fair street, in which both cars were somewhat damaged, was reported to the police Mooday afternoon.

Guess Whose Shadow This Is

From the cradle to the grave, literally, the first of which this gentleman is the head, can serve you.

Silhouette No. 12 was that of Christian W. Winne, manager of The Stuyvesant, who is so busy that he had no time to pose for the silhouette artist and said so. While Mr. Winne was saying it, the artist made the silhouette.

Salzmann Heads Charity Board

The board of charity commissioners met and organized on Monday afternoon at the City Home by electing J. Leonard Salzmann president of the board. The other members are Commissioners William C. Coutant and William Byrne.

The board reappointed Dr. Fred Huhne city physician for the eastern department and Dr. W. D. Hasbrouck for the western department and City Home, at salaries of $600 a year each.

President Salzmann was authorized to enter into a contract with the Kingston City Hospital for $4,500 and the Benedictine Hospital for $3,000 for the care of the sick who are unable to pay for treatment. These amounts are the same as in former years.

Superintendent Thomas H. Edmonston, under the civil service rules, remains as superintendent of the City Home and also acts as secretary of the board.

Season's First Coasting Victim

Harry Sussin, 14 year old son of Bernard Sussin, the tailor at No. 350 Broadway, is in the Kingston City Hospital with a fractured skull as the result of a coasting accident at Murray and Chambers streets about 3:50 o'clock Monday afternoon, when he ran his sled into a Ford delivery truck driven by W. Harry Durling, of the Flatbush road.

According to the police report of the accident, Mr. Durling was driving through Murray street at a speed of less than 15 miles an hour when the lad on his sled came coasting down Chambers street and crashed into the automobile.

At the hospital this morning it was stated that the lad's condition was favorable. He is under the care of Dr. A. A. Stern.

Three City Girls On Burning Liner

The Misses Davis, Helen Hitchcock and Muriel Thiel Were Passengers on Ill Fated Mohawk Which Caught Fire—All Three Are Safe.

Three Kingston girls were passensengers on the Clyde liner Mohawk which caught fire New Year's night while enroute from New York to Jacksonville, Florida, and all three were taken safely ashore, according to word received in this city on Monday. The three girls were Miss Davis, daughter of Mrs. Anna Davis of No. 53 Hudson street; Miss Helen Hitchcock of the Stuyvesant Hotel staff, and Miss Muriel Thiel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Roosa of No. 195 Downs street.

DR. SCHOEN TO CLOSE BUSINESS HERE

Dr. R. Schoen who for over three years has successfully practised optometry in this city with offices at 40 John street, has purchased an old established optical office in The Bronx. He will move to New York on January 9. As his new location will require all his time Dr. Schoen has decided to close the Kingston office. By fair and honest dealing Dr. Schoen built up a fine practice and made many friends. He has been one of the most active leaders of the local Y. M. H. A., was its president for one year and recently on account of his leaving town resigned as chairman of the joint executive board of the Y. M. H. A.

Our Growing Population.

The following births have been reported to the board of health:

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Karol, 73 Chambers street, a daughter, Helen.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lickie, First avenue, a son, Frank.

Government May Sell Armory Next Spring

Now That Local Militia Companies Have Been Transferred to Artillery Units, a Riding Rink and Stables for Horses May Be Secured, While Big Drill Shed Goes in Discard.

Now that the local militia units at the state armory here have been transferred to artillery units there is considerable talk that the Federal government will sell the local armory at public auction and with the proceeds purchase sufficient land on which to erect stables and a riding rink where the members of the artillery units may have room enough to drill with full equipment.

According to rumor the local armory will be offered at auction in the spring. It is also rumored that a farm on Manor avenue may be purchased, and the necessary buildings needed by the local units erected on it.

At the present time the Federal government has not enough horses to supply all of the units with the full quota, and it is likely that instead of the over two hundred horses needed to fully equip Batteries A and B that the government will supply but eighty horses. These horses, however, will not be supplied the local batteries until stables and other buildings have been erected to house them.

Must Indict All Law Breakers

Supreme Court Justice Hasbrouck Charges Grand Jury to Return Bills Against Rich and Poor Alike.

Supreme Court Justice Gilbert D. B. Hasbrouck, issuing the charge to the Albany county grand jury Monday urged indictment of "all men who are at odds, maliciously and willfully, with the law," and said "such should be prosecuted inexorably, whether rich or poor, weak or powerful."

The charge was interpreted by attorneys at court for reading of the calendar as favoring more thorough investigation of crime and sentences to the limit of the law.

Immediately prior to making his charge to the jury, Justice Hasbrouck fined four men $10 each who failed to appear at court in answer to summons for grand jury duty.

"My congratulations to you upon having been selected to sit with the grand jury have a deep significance," Justice Hasbrouck said, "for we believe that our government is the greatest on earth. If this be true, the grand jury can keep it so.

"Justice cannot be bought in this country," Justice Hasbrouck said, "as long as the grand jury fulfills the duty for which it was organized."

"Your work is of special significance at this time," he said, "when so many persons are coming to our shores from foreign countries who say that these United States have a bad form of government. These foreigners are coming to constitute a large percentage of our population.

"We have an unusual form of government which is the inheritance of our forefathers, handed down to us for the continuance of the liberty of the people of this land. The one important thing against which they had to defend themselves was the possibility of being placed in jail at the will of one person. Thus, in order to bring forth a new security to persons, there grew up the tribunal of the grand jury for the purpose of seeing that no one is unjustly presented for crime. It is the priceless inheritance of the people of this republic."

More Hoboes for Ulster County

Urbain J. Ledoux, friend of the jobless, referred to in New York papers as "Mr. Zero," has announced that he has accepted an offer of the use of a farm of 125 acres in Ulster county as an unemployed men's community farm. The offer was received by Mr. Ledoux on Christmas Day from the Rev. Charles L. Clist, a Congregational minister of New Brunswick, New Jersey. Mr. Clist, who is 60 years old, is also a union carpenter and printer.

Thus far no details concerning the exact location of the farm have been gained. It is, however, believed that it is located in the northern portion of Ulster county, in the foothills of the Catskills.

CITY'S CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION WAS FIRST

Kingston's Municipal Civil Service Commission, President Harry S. Watts, and Commissioners James S. McAndrew and Peter J. Crough, have received a letter from the State Civil Service Commission at Albany stating, "Your commission has the distinction of being the first to file its annual report for the year 1924."

Green Street Property Sold.

Former Supervisor Bartholomew J. Callahan of the town of Kingston, who resides in Sawkill, has purchased the double residence properties at 25-25½ Green street. After making some alterations and improvements Mr. Callahan will move his family to Kingston and occupy one of the houses. The negotiations for the transfer were made through the Frank Dutton real estate agency, 290 Fair street.

Electric Company Building Plans

Kingston Gas & Electric Company's Comprehensive Program of Improvements and Building to Care for Necessary Equipment Nearing Completion.

The building program for the Kingston Gas & Electric Company, as outlined in The Freeman last spring, is nearly completed. Actual work began in November.

The first unit consisted of new garage on Broadway, 110 feet by 30 feet, to provide storage for the gas service cars and trucks. A novel installation of a gas heater automatically controlled to heat garage has been installed which does away with necessity of cold storage and other inconveniences of coal fires.

At the gas works in Rondout they have built a building to house the gas manufacturing equipment which has been doubled in size without interrupting service to the consumers. At the present time modern equipment is being installed.

The old one-story garage building on Broadway in the rear of main office is being altered to a two-story fire proof storage building for the gas appliances departments and meter shop. The plan for this work required the raising of a fifty ton reinforced concrete roof on steel skeleton 48 feet by 28 feet, to be raised in one piece to provide for construction of the two-story building underneath.

Work on the alteration and addition to the office building, which include interior changes and the building of a wing in the rear, will be started immediately.

All work is being done by the W. E. Joyce Company, engineers and contractors, of this city.

Re-establish Gold Standard

Great Britain Believed to Be Making Such Efforts, Which Would Improve World Trade, Especially America's Foreign Commerce.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Negotiations looking to the re-establishment of the gold standard for British currency and bringing the pound sterling back to par have been started in New York by Sir Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, according to official information received by the government today.

The presence of Norman and Allan Anderson and other officials of the Bank of England had caused considerable speculation in this country. They have been in New York several days.

Officials here were not certain whether an effort will be made to negotiate a large loan which might be followed by a heavy export of gold to England. However, it was pointed out, there are indications that the British bankers will be successful in their effort to obtain the necessary financial support to bring the pound sterling back to par.

Government experts pointed out that once the pound is back to par a great improvement should be seen in world trade, and especially in the foreign commerce of the United States. Fluctuating bond currency, it was stated, puts the gold standard currency at a serious disadvantage in international trade.

Clothes Line Thief Escaped.

About 6 o'clock Monday evening Mrs. Virgil H. Winchell, Jr., who resides at 50 Green street, while looking out of a window, noticed a man who acted suspiciously walking into the yard of the C. A. Schermerhorn property adjoining at 76 Pearl street. She went out to ask him what he wanted but as he saw her approach he grabbed two shirts and other articles from the clothes line in the Schermerhorn yard and ran away.

Coolidge Seeks Stone's Successor

Attorney Generalship Vacant on Promotion of Harlan Fiske Stone to United States Court Bench—Several Candidates Mentioned.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 6.—President Coolidge busied himself today with the task of filling the fourth vacancy in his cabinet since he came to the White House. For the second time it is the attorney generalship.

Before him were a score of names from which to select a successor to Harlan Fiske Stone. Announcement of his choice probably will be made after the senate has acted upon Stone's nomination to the Supreme bench. That action is expected today or tomorrow.

The field of those whom the president has under serious consideration, it is said, has narrowed to five, with perhaps the leading figure being that of Charles Beecher Warren of Detroit, formerly ambassador to Japan and Mexico, participant in the conference that resulted in recognition of Mexico, chairman of the rules committee of the Cleveland Republican National Convention and nationally prominent lawyer.

Warren just before Christmas was a White House visitor. No intimation was forthcoming at the time as to the nature of his business. In view, however, of the speed with which Mr. Coolidge appointed Attorney General Stone to the vacancy on the Supreme court, is was assumed by many here that he has been forewarned of Justice McKenna's determination to retire and had already made a decision as to his successor.

Also mentioned are General James Beck, present acting head of department of justice; Robert Rugg, chief justice of the Massachusetts Supreme court, a personal friend of the president; Frank S. Dietrich, United States District judge for the district of Idaho, whom Senator Borah urged for the post last year, and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur.

Booming Guns Warn of Floods

Waters Rose so Rapidly in Leningrad That Fortress Guns Were Only Means Possible to Warn Populace of Danger.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Leningrad, Jan. 6.—The ominous warning booming of the Kronstadt fortress guns ceased with the rising of the sun today and Leningrad surveyed a countryside made desolate by floods.

The danger is not yet passed for the storm still rages. Damage, it was estimated today, totalled $3,000,000.

Roads flooded and other communication interrupted, the only way in which officials could warn the populace of the rapidly rising waters was by means of the Kronstadt guns.

Various sections of the city are entirely under water.

Actors were called upon to play a strange real-life role. Flood waters swirled around the Maryinsky Theater during a performance. The actors were on the stage when officials announced the audience must be dismissed. Still in their make-ups the actors joined with firemen in rescuing their scenery and "props."

The Smalny cemetery was inundated and many graves and mausoleums washed away.

At Peterhof the palaces and parks were flooded and several fishermen lost their lives.

At various places in the countryside the water is eleven feet deep on what hitherto was dry land. Telegraph poles were carried away by the rushing waters.

ROCHE, OLD TIME TRAMP PRINTER, REPORTED DEAD

"Jim" Roche, one of the last of the old time tramp printers, died suddenly at Hornell recently of heart disease. He had for over fifty years travelled about the country working at intervals in different printing offices, and had a regular route which he covered every year and which included this city. He was about 74 years old and had a sister living at Little Falls. He was a member of the Rochester Typographical Union.

Mrs. Eden to Leave Kingston.

Mrs. J. Eden, who for a number of years has conducted a jewelry business in this city, has announced that she will discontinue her store at 40 Broadway some time this month. The stock of jewelry will be disposed of in a fifteen-day sale commencing today. It is understood that after disposing of her local store, Mrs. Eden will make her home in Brooklyn, where she has other business interests.

Salary Bill Veto Raises Economy Issue in Senate

Vote on President's Veto to be Taken in Senate Before Night—Test Vote Shows Break in Republican Ranks—Bill's Fate Uncertain.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The Coolidge administration's policy of drastic economy was at issue in the Senate today with a vote pending on the president's veto of the postal salary bill.

Administration leaders rallied their forces to save the president from being overridden and to sustain his declaration that no postal pay increases can be allowed without a direct provision for raising the necessary revenue. The administration spokesmen have confided the bill will be enacted by the house if the Senate override the president.

A direct vote on the veto will be reached by the Senate at 4 o'clock this afternoon under an unanimous consent agreement. Supporters of the pay bill were three votes short of the required two thirds majority when they defeated an administration effort to recommit the bill to the Senate postoffice committee.

On the test vote nineteen Republicans including such administration spokesmen as Senators Reed, Republican of Pennsylvania and Wadsworth Republican of New York, opposed the president's viewpoint. Despite this big break in administration ranks, the bill was not assured of passage.

Both Republican and Democratic senators attacked the president's position on the pay bill.

"The only issue," said Senator Hiram W. Johnson, Republican of California, "is whether the United States is big enough, generous enough and decent enough to pay a living wage to its employes."

Senator Copeland, Democrat of New York, charged the executive with attempting to becloud the real issue.

"There is no reason," said Copeland, "for any senator to change his vote because he had buckwheat cakes and sausage at the White House. The only question here is whether postal employes are entitled to living wages."

Coal Strike Opens With Murder

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Pittston, Pa., Jan. 6.—Bloodshed marked the strike of the 12,000 miners of the Pennsylvania Coal Company today when Sam Pace, 31, secretary of a local union, was shot to death as he returned home after attending a meeting of the miners' union, according to police. Residents of the neighborhood saw two men running away. Pace was found dead in the snow with 14 bullets in his body. Pace, a World War veteran, was one of the miners on strike.

The body of Pace was found with three bullet wounds in his chest, four in his legs and seven in his stomach. The bullets were all steel jacketed.

Pace leaves a widow and three children.

Woman Poisoner Shows Gaiety

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 6.—Joliet's gray walls, that loomed in the offing for "35 years," had no depressing effect upon Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, convicted poisoner of her husband, Wilford, when she stopped in St. Louis for twenty minutes between trains today on the way to the penitentiary in custody of Sheriff Grant Holcomb of Mount Vernon.

Dressed in her Sunday best she laughed and chatted with reporters who constituted a reception committee.

FAMOUS CONGREGATIONAL CLERGYMAN DEAD

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 6.—The Rev. Dr. Newman Smith, long a Fellow of Yale University and retired Congregational clergyman, died at his home here today after a brief illness. He was 82 years old. Dr. Smyth had an international reputation for efforts toward reunion of all Christian churches of the world.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

CHRISTMAS LOVE

"There is nothing in the world like it," said Santa Claus.

Boy of the North, Santa's dog, wagged his tail and looked up at his master.

He seemed to know that Santa was going to say something else by way of explanation.

"There is nothing in the world like it," Santa Claus said again. "I mean," he explained, "that there is nothing in the world like Christmas love.

"It is the very best and the very most beautiful love in the world.

"Perhaps I should say that love is the very best and the very most beautiful thing in the world without saying anything about Christmas love.

"And it is [illegible] perfect, quite by itself. Without [illegible] families and our friends, without being able to feel affection for each other, we'd find nothing in life very interesting.

"If someone won a prize, or was very brave or did something fine or noble or clever, it would not be very much fun if there were not those we love to whom we could talk about it or who would be proud of us.

"If no one loved Santa Claus, for example, there would be no pleasure in anything. Why, my whole life work would be work then and not play as it is now!

"If mothers and daddies did not love their children there would be no pleasure in belonging to a family. One might just as well be anywhere, at any time; and then no one would care!

"If children didn't love others there would be no joyous good times. There couldn't be the same enjoyment.

"And so of course there is nothing like love, for it makes everything else beautiful and happy and interesting and fine.

"But Christmas love! Oh, Christmas love, Boy of the North, is so wonderful, so perfect.

"It is just at Christmas time that Christmas love is at its height.

"Sometimes throughout the year, beginning perhaps in the summer, people will begin to save a little money to give Christmas presents and their hearts will begin to feel some of that Christmas love then.

"But around Christmas time people have so much Christmas love in their hearts.

"It seems as though they could not do too much for each other. They plan what they will give and they have such fun in planning.

"They work over their gifts and they have so much fun in working.

"They earn money so they will have more Christmas money.

"They give more than they feel they should—and have a gorgeous time doing so.

"They love their own presents, too, because the ones they receive are from their families and friends who care for them and think of them.

Put His Head in His Master's Lap.

"They love Santa Claus' presents because they know how much Santa loves them.

"And my thanks are their love and their smiles of delight and happiness.

"Those looks and those smiles and those shouts of joy are what make me so jolly a person.

"And they keep me young.

"Ah, yes, Santa will never grow really, really old as long as the children love him!

"You know that, Boy of the North."

And Boy of the North thumped his tail very, very hard and put his head in his master's lap and looked at him with his adoring eyes.

"We shall see them soon. We shall look through our magic telescope, which makes us see so far, far, far away, and we shall see into the windows, and we'll know that Santa's visit was not frowned upon!

"No, not frowned upon, Boy of the North:

"Ah, Christmas love—Santa Claus is ready to go on record (which means he is always willing to stand by this statement) that he thinks there is nothing in the world to compare with it!"

Brother Would Follow

Lewis had just started school and as he began to write with his left hand the teacher questioned him.

"Lewis, did your father or mother ever write with the left hand?"

Lewis quickly replied, "No, ma'am, but I guess my baby brother will."

Not for Politeness

Mamma (to small hopeful)—Roland, you should not ask the lady how old she is; it is not polite.

Roland—I wasn't trying to be polite, mamma. I just wanted to know.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

I love all beauteous things,
I seek and adore them;
God hath no better praise
And man in his hasty days
Is honored for them.

I, too, will something make
And joy in the making,
Altho' tomorrow it seems
Like the empty words of a dream,
Remembered in making.

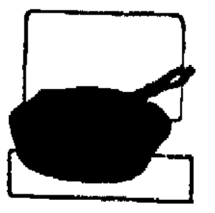
WHAT TO EAT

Here are a few tempting economical dishes that are not hard to prepare:



Chop Suey.—take one pound of veal steak cut into cubes, one-fourth pound of fresh pork, also cut into cubes; cook until well-browned in a hot frying pan, adding a tablespoonful of butter; turn in two cupfuls of celery diced, one cupful of Spanish onions chopped, one tablespoonful of chopped peanuts, a can of mushrooms—dried ones will do if previously soaked—one teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and white pepper to taste. Cook the vegetables until tender, then add the various seasonings and two tablespoonfuls of kitchen bouquet or a tablespoonful of worcestershire sauce. Simmer for twenty minutes and serve heaped in the center of a hot platter with a ring of seasoned hot boiled rice around it.

Economy Stew.—Take one pound of round of beef and brown it in two tablespoonfuls of suet until both are well browned. Add one tablespoonful of flour and one quart of water to which two beef cubes have been added; cook for three-quarters of an hour at a simmering temperature, then add three carrots, two potatoes diced, and one tablespoonful of rice. Cook until the vegetables are well done, season to taste with salt if needed, pepper and any table sauce desired.

Chicken Curry.—Cut two cupfuls of chicken into small dice. Cook one large, sliced onion in four tablespoonfuls of butter; when tender add three tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of curry powder and stir over the fire for two minutes, then add one sour apple peeled and chopped, one and one-half cupfuls of water or stock, the chicken, and cook slowly for half an hour. Add one cupful of cream, a little worcestershire and kitchen bouquet, pepper and salt needed, and serve with a border of boiled seasoned rice.

OLIVE BRIDGE.

Olive Bridge, Jan. 6.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fawkner and son Charles of Brooklyn, spent the holidays with Mrs. Fawkner's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roosa.

Mrs. Grover Winchell spent part of the holiday vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Broadhead at Kerhonkson.

Miss Nellie Marshall, who was employed at Lake Mohonk during the past season, has been spending a couple of months at her home here. She is now visiting her brother Harvey, at Gilboa.

Mrs. Henry Sheldon spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Brooks North at Atwood.

Mrs. Annie Hyatt and son Stephen, of Kingston, spent the holidays with Mrs. Hyatt's sister, Mrs. Henry Winchell.

Isaac L. Becsmer is not feeling very well at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Winchell have recently installed a new radio and many pleasing programs are being received.

It is reported that the property now occupied by George Whitney has been sold to Mr. Breuchaud.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roosa of High Point Springs Farms and Miss Ethel Roosa of Brooklyn, visited Mr. and Mrs. Henry Winchell New Year's night. A pleasant evening was spent "listening in" to a radio concert by John McCormack and other celebrated singers from New York. The program of WDBZ, the Boy Scouts' broadcasting station of Kingston, was also received very clearly.

John Marshall who was employed at the Lake Mohonk Mountain House during the past season is at home for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. Jules Breuchaud of New York city spent a part of the holiday season at their High Point Springs Farms here.

Egbert Van Kleeck, town collector, is receiving taxes at present. People generally will be glad to note the slight reduction in the tax rate.

Another old landmark has been removed. Supt. Frank Roosa of High Point Springs Farms, has just completed removing the buildings and shade trees, from the place formerly occupied by John Alexander, near the city boulevard.

Mrs. Orpha Van Kleeck and family have removed to the High Point Springs Farms, occupying the old Winchell farm house recently vacated by Kenneth Dudery.

Miss Ethel Roosa who has been spending a month's vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roosa, has returned to the city. Miss Roosa will be remembered as a former school teacher, a graduate of New Paltz Normal School, who now holds a lucrative position with the Educator Company, on Fifth avenue, New York city.

The Winchell district school reopened Monday following the Christmas vacation, with Miss Satterlee as teacher.

Dorothy Sheldon spent Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Henry Winchell.

Miss Gladys Markle, who has been employed at Kingston, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abram F. Markle recently.

Eccentric English Duke

The duke of Bedford's gold plate at Woburn abbey is among the most magnificent collections of its kind in the world. So lightly, however, was it regarded by the eighth duke, that on his death in 1872 gold plate worth tens of thousands of dollars was found strewn about the floor of his house in Belgrave square in such a deplorable condition that it narrowly escaped being consigned to the dustbin as worthless metal.

Indian Tribal Language

American Indians are divided into groups and the languages of the various groups are found to differ to such a degree that one is not intelligible to another. Often within the same linguistic family different tribes speak radically different dialects. This is true of the Pueblos in the Southwest. Inhabitants of villages only 100 miles apart cannot understand each other's native tongues.

"Don't Go! Come!"

"Where shall I go to get it?" mentally asks the man or woman with a want to be supplied.

"Don't go! Come!" says the merchant who advertises.

Here are the goods you want; here is the service you need," he adds.

Newspaper advertising is the most traveled bridge between supply and demand.

That is why it pays the Advertiser.

inty Gowns for Youth and Beauty test Fashions for Debutantes Excel in Delicate Loveliness.

his is the debutante's hour, that hanted moment when she stands th reluctant feet, where the brook river meet," and sees the world ore her. Happily, the label "flap-," which never did really apply, gone into oblivion with the weird es that appeared simultaneously. debutante of today is a creature loveliness, says a fashion authority the New York Times.

he is the most inspiring subject the s creator ever meets to challenge art, and less imagination is re- red to gown her properly than to n any other prospect that comes the atelier. Youth is ever engaging ever appeals to our gentlest con- tions. No modiste who recalls the she had in dressing the doll of her ldhood will be bored at the task of lding a wardrobe for the girl who just stepping into her first season.

It may be that, to quote a Paris hion authority, the debutante has nor importance in the Continental ial scheme of things, but this has prevented the designers from send- to our part of the world the most lightful modes that have ever rmed the heart of a "bud." And be- use of the better appreciation here, merican designers have produced me of the most adorable and alto- ther suitable styles for young wom-. These styles are invariably of the rt that has an appeal for the most ined, the best form in the world of shion.

For the last four years the trend of yles has been interesting. Fash- ns have swung from one extreme to other until designers have despaired ally of discovering novelty that uld be made to harmonize with art d beauty and taste.

Two seasons, even one season ago, e outre, the casual yet showy type frock, was the thing most worn. It s the furthest stroke of the pendu- n from the conventional which, in countless variations, had been the cepted standard for so long. This tre idea was certain to go, for youth ves beauty, and dancing youth loves ace and ease and some quality of tinguishing elegance. The one-piece ude and graceless frocks that came ter the pretty floating chiffons lived t a little while.

Like "Period Gowns."

While the season's modes of the nventional type are attractive, the ncy for "period" gowns endures, and most every house of consequence of- rs quaint, picturesque frocks that ve compelling grace and charm and unmistakable chic as they are orn by the smart young women of to- y.

Some of these frocks are done in lk of the finest, most lustrous qual- y, the very simplicity of the design

iving more importance to the fabric. This is the sort of evening gown in hich Lanvin delights. It is especial- y becoming to young women of slen- er figure and patrician bearing.

One of these models of definite type made of heavy ivory taffeta, stiff nd shimmering, in a style slightly di- ectoire. The bodice, which is plain, nd the skirt, which is very full and nkle length, are joined at the normal aistline. The frock entire opens own the front over a waistcoat and etticoat of turquoise-blue chiffon vel- et and the whole costume is finished own each side of the front and around e bottom and the short shoulder- eeves with a pointed band trimming f the velvet and pearls.

In another mood Lanvin expressed feeling for the Spanish in a [illegible] icture frock, also of white silk, with a ng-fitting, sleeveless bodice, un- immed, and a full, slightly crinolined irt veiled with black Spanish lace, [illegible] with spangles. Silver kid ancing slippers are worn with both of ese unusual costumes.

Cherult, whose gowns have always a conspicuous touch of poetic beauty in a flower, a sash, a scarf or some other distinctive feature, is using many of the handsome materials for the young models this season. No Parisian house ever offers more tempting combinations and harmonies of color.

In one of the latest designs a brocade of subtly woven fuchsia and gold is made into a simple evening gown. The bodice is the usual plain tunic-blouse, straight to the hips, without sleeves, the neck cut V-shape, back and front, and the skirt, which is short, is godeted at each side from the knee to the hem. The piece de resistance of the whole costume is a wide sash of reseda-green chiffon velvet. It is drawn close about the hips and hangs loosely, knotted with long ends at one side.

Another Cherult model in black satin is in one piece, very short as to skirtline and relieved with a gay scarf of green-gold that drapes the decollete neck and hangs over one shoulder to the bottom of the dress.

Dance Frock, Gray Tulle, Two Shades, Over Silver Tissue.

Late Models From Paris.

A Parisian creator of prestige has sent to one of the smaller and more exclusive shops some last-word models designed to catch the fancy of a debutante who elects to be chic and dainty. Most of the frocks are of the one-piece style, some slightly godeted, and all of them are of the finest, sheerest stuffs and of delightful colors.

One in rose and silver is a sort of silk grenadine, with stripes of gold and silver lacily threading the weave to form a zigzag pattern, the points perpendicular. Another, enchanting as a full-blown flower, is achieved with rose-colored tulle in two shades, over silver tissue shot with rose. A circular flounced skirt that falls in points is very bouffant. The bodice of silver cloth is almost hidden by a winding scarf of tulle.

A debutante frock of pale-green chiffon, embroidered in the most delicate tracing of silver in a long sweeping feather pattern, is beautiful as moonlight on a summer sea. This gown follows the line of the figure to the hips, and flares slightly with fan-shaped godet inserts to the hem. Still another in this rare collection is a frock of hyacinth-blue chiffon with silver tinsel needlework.

In some late models Callot has a flair for swaying fringes in her dance frocks, and handles the idea with genius. The note of youth dominates the richness of material and trimming. White and gold is the scheme in one of the most distinguished models shown by this establishment. Luxurious beauty is expressed in a glistening brocade, severely cut, with motifs of gold embroidery forming the points of a three-quarter tunic, and two lower flounces, each finished with gilt and crystal fringes. These are typical of the handsomer gowns designed for young women who have the stature and the carriage to wear them.

Airy Fabrics Used.

We are a long way from the colonial times when the belle of the ball wore dotted swiss with blue ribbons and a neck-band of black velvet, and when muslin or a shimmery silk was considered an achievement in dress for a debutante. But the idea still lives and prompts the designer to build youthful evening gowns of the lovely airy fabrics and the colors of fancy and poesy.

One looks for snowy white, baby blue or faintest pink or gold to set off a rose-leaf skin, fair young arms and hands, and for materials that will cling most gracefully or float with fairy lightness in the dance. Fine detail in ornamentation and naivete in design are elements in the ideal costume for the first ball or the presentation party. There are variants in style without number, as there are types of women, but there is a consistent idea guiding the artist's brush.

Peaches-and-cream complexions are not made more delicate by intense colors and extreme modes taken from Far East classics. And dainty feet have no elusive prettiness beneath sharp lines and heavy fabrics. These are among the reasons for the return of light, graceful, picturesque frocks and beautiful wraps that are now shown for young women, making their formal curtsy to the beau monde.

BOYS PLEDGE $27.50 FOR H. T. O. F. CAMPAIGN

W. F. D. Filer, a Y. M. C. A. secretary from Japan, gave the boys, who are working on the Y. M. C. A. Help the Other Fellow Campaign, a splendid talk on life in Japan. He illustrated his talk with many pictures of the country and the boy life.

After this talk, the boys made their pledges toward the campaign. $27.50 was pledged by the 24 boys present. This was a fine start, and with 200 more boys to hear from in the next two days it will mean a great deal toward the completion of a successful campaign.

Today the boys start delivering the little booklet and envelope that tells the story of the work that the "Y" is doing with boys in the foreign countries. On Thursday and Friday they will collect the envelopes from the householders and on Friday night they will count their money and divide it among the various agencies that they are going to give to.

The lighthouse, presented to the boys by L. Barth and Co., is still flashing out its message daily that the call this week is keep the light of the "Y" burning throughout the whole world.

AROUND THE WORLD EXHIBIT OF "Y" WORK

Mr. Hall, the boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has prepared an exhibit of maps, pictures, etc., showing what the "Y" is doing throughout the world. This exhibit is in the lobby of the local association and the public is cordially invited to drop in and see for themselves what is being done.

Some of the pictures are of the local association boys work, while others are of foreign groups and have been taken by friends of Mr. Hall, who are foreign secretaries.

One of the pictures shows a group of young men being led by a young man, who was a boy in a Brooklyn association, and was trained in the leadership by Mr. Hall.

Rand School Speaker Here.

Hon. August Claessens, former member of Assembly of New York, who is an instructor in the Rand School, will speak at Mann's Hall, 91 Broadway, on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, under the auspices of Workmen's Circle, Branch 125, of Kingston. His topic will be "Are the Conditions of the Masses Growing Better or Worse?"

Gave Tint to Water

Opposite Buckingham palace is to be found the Victoria memorial. This beautiful piece of workmanship is particularly remarkable for the clear, delicate green of the water in its marble basin. The secret of its coloring and translucency was revealed recently when two workmen were observed solemnly drawing a large sack to and fro through the water. They explained to an interested onlooker that the sack was filled with a certain substance which, while preventing the growth of weeds, gave the water its delicate apple-green tint.—London Times.

500 MILES AN HOUR.

That airplanes capable of a speed of 500 miles an hour will be produced is the serious prediction of Commander Burney of the British navy. This is startling, but will not necessarily be greeted with absolute incredulity, for the speed of heavier-than-air craft has steadily increased, the record of less than forty miles an hour 21 years ago having mounted to 278. The record of Lieut. A. J. Williams, who flew 266.59 miles an hour on November 4, 1923, has already been displaced by Adjutant Florentin Bonnet, who on December 11, 1924, attained a speed of 278.48 miles an hour. A further gain of 222 miles in order to reach the 500 mark would seem to be beyond the bounds of possibility, and yet would it be any greater marvel than some that have amazed us in recent years? Moreover, Commander Burney, inventor and leader in British aeronautics, should know a good deal about the prospects in the field of flying.

We can no longer doubt that a speed of 300 miles an hour will soon be reached, and when we consider that there has been a gain of 114 miles an hour in the last five years, a further gain of 200 miles in the course of time, though naturally it seems improbable, will not be hastily dismissed as utterly impossible. But we shrink back, inevitably reluctant, from the picture presented by Commander Burney when he predicts that in ten years bombing planes will be able to cross the Pacific in three days and destroy great cities.

BOYS IN FEMALE PARTS.

Some of our shapely-faced college boys have played girl parts in theatrical productions with such success and looked so pretty that susceptible youths in the audience are reported to have fallen in love with them. But, judging from Sir James M. Barrie's own account, very few college boys have equalled him in this line of endeavor or so nearly approached the standard of the Elizabethan era, when boyish female impersonators were the rule on the professional stage. Speaking at Dumfries, Scotland, recently, the author of "The Little Minister" and "Sentimental Tommy" gave the following interesting account of his youthful stage triumph.

I may perhaps be allowed to tell you without unpardonable elation—so many years having elapsed—that at one of our performances at the Chrichton a male member of the audience asked for an introduction. I think I did greatest credit on one occasion when the curtain rose on my husband and me about to partake of breakfast, and in his stage fright my husband pulled the table cover and its contents to the floor. How would a superb actress have risen to that emergency? I have asked some of them—Sarah Bernhardt and others—and none of them conceived anything equal to what Adele did—Adele was my name. It was taken from the French—but the unworthy youth who played my husband would call me Addle, to my annoyance; I went behind him, and, putting my arms round his neck, I said: 'You clumsy darling!' The house rose—I don't mean they went out—several of them cheered. Thus was a great commedienne lost to the world. The next time I saw that play was in London, with Miss Irene Vanburgh in my part. You may guess I was critical, and she was nervous. I told her I thought her good, but that she was lacking in some of my womanly touches.

Renewing worn out dollar bills is said to cost the Government about $800,000 a year. This explains the coinage of a new silver dollar and the systematic effort to put it into general circulation. But the new "cartwheel," though more artistic in adornment, is just as burdensome—as heavy and inconvenient as the old. For this reason the public will be as eager as to ever to fight shy of it whenever it is possible to get a paper dollar instead. As formerly, the heavy and bulky silver dollar will inevitably tend to drift back to its source.

S. S. McClure, of Magazine fame, points out that the largest body of wealth in the world is in North America, while "across the Pacific are four nations which contain half the population of the entire globe, so crowded on the earth's surface that they are continually on the verge of starvation." Without directly joining in the renewed "yellow peril" outcry, Mr. McClure takes pains to observe that "unprotected wealth is a great temptation to the needy."

It is stated that few members of the Federation of Labor knew that Samuel Gompers was a Jew until a rabbi took charge of the religious features of his funeral. Few know that Einstein and Freud are Jews.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

A DAILY NEED.

There isn't any sensible person these days that will try to tell you that exercise is not only beneficial, but actually necessary to the body.

But just what exercise you should take and how much is something that you confess you don't know, and perhaps have reached the point where you don't care.

Now the ideal exercise would be something that exercised all parts of the body, and also something that you liked.

And if you can play a game that calls into action the bending of your body, and the use of the legs, then you are getting the ideal exercise for that body of yours.

The bending of the body to reach a base ball, a tennis ball, a lacrosse ball, a foot ball, a golf ball, or a bowl, will bring into play those abdominal muscles on the front and sides of the body which will play directly across the intestines, and stimulate digestion and intestinal movement.

The muscles on the back, which bring you up from the bending position, are strengthened, and with front and back muscles receiving this development, the proper "carriage" of your body is assured.

And then the use of the legs, as I've said before, by lifting your body off the ground, calls into play all the muscles of the legs, much more in fact that you have anywhere else. This requires stronger action of the heart to get the blood down there, and stronger action of the lungs to purify this extra quantity of blood, that is required to replace the used, or impure blood in this big bulk of muscle.

But you say, "I can't get a chance at any of these games." Perhaps you feel that you are too old for these games.

But you can still bend your body, and you can walk or run slowly.

Three to four minutes twice a day will keep you pliable and your heart and lungs strong.

Teaching the "Y" Girls to Swim

Only One of Numerous Activities Which Help Young Women Now in Effect at the Y. W. C. A.

Activities in the health education department of the Y. W. C. A. are again in full swing since Monday, when the inter-Sunday School Basketball League and the Business Girls' gymnasium class took up their work again after the Christmas holidays. All other league teams will hold their practice as usual throughout the week. Games will be starting very soon and every team member is urged to be present.

The women's Wednesday morning class will be held from 11 to 12 starting this week. Registrations may be phoned in to the Y. W. C. A. office.

Swimming and bowling at the Y. M. C. A. tonight will be as usual. In the bowling tournament teams four and five will play. Competition is keen in the tournament and all girls interested in bowling are invited to come and try the new ten pound balls which are much lighter than the others and are ready for use.

Swimming is from 7 till 10 and is in half hour periods. Special attention is paid to beginners as one of the aims is to have as many girls and women as possible learn how to swim. With the increased popularity of water sports of all kinds it is vitally necessary that everyone should learn to swim and that the general public recognize the dangers involved in swimming, canoeing and similar sports. If dangers are to be lessened and water sports made safe, people must not only learn how to swim, teach others to swim, but if possible learn the American Red Cross life saving methods in an endeavor to eliminate the preventable loss of life caused by drowning. All girls between the ages of twelve to seventeen are eligible to try for the junior life saving badge and all girls over 17 are eligible for the senior badge. The requirements for taking the work are not hard and a new class will start the first Tuesday in February. It is important that the enrollment in this class be complete by the first lesson so that the preliminary work will be given to any girls wishing to take it on any Tuesday during this month.

All girls who can swim two different strokes or more are asked to come out for the life saving class and cooperate with the American Red Cross by doing their best to help lessen the loss of life in this community or wherever else they may be.

TODAY WE CELEBRATE

ELIZABETH CLAYPOLE.

Was the second and favorite daughter of the protector, Oliver Cromwell. She was born at Huntington in 1620 and in 1646 married John Claypole, Esq., of a respectable family in Northamptonshire, who afterwards became master of the horse both to Oliver and his son, Richard. Mrs. Claypole was invariably the friend of the oppressed, and exerted her gentle but powerful influence over her father in favor of the suffering royalists. She died at Hampton Court August 6 1658, in her twenty-ninth year.

THE TELEGRAPH.

The first telegraph instrument was completed and the first message sent over a wire 87 years ago today, January 6, 1838. Samuel Morse, the inventor of the electric telegraph, and Alfred Vail, his able assistant and financial backer, were the "key pounders" who sent the first telegram, over a wire three miles in length.

The code used was an invention of Alfred Vail an uncle of the man who was later the head of the Bell Telephone Company and consisted of a series of dots and dashes, since universally, but erroneously called "the Morse alphabet." Vail's father had promised to help in the promotion of the invention if it proved its worth, but he was a skeptic, and on the day of the first trial he put the scheme to the test.

He wrote, "A patient waiter is no loser," and, handing the scrap of paper to his son said, "If you can send that and Morse can read it at the other end of the wire I will be convinced." The message was duly sent and received, and, after a delay of four years, the instrument was given an official test between Washington and Baltimore, Morse and Vail again playing the role of operatives.

POLISH FESTIVAL OF THE THREE KINGS.

Although Poland now has a President, instead of a King, the people of the much troubled country will celebrate the Festival of the Three Kings or Epiphany. Polish folks in America will also join in this event, which is of very ancient observance among the Polish Nation. The program begins with a solemn procession in the church. At the Mass the priests will bless gold, frankincense and myrrh, and bits of chalk. The latter will be distributed among the heads of families, and on returning to their homes they will mark on the doors the initials "C. M. B.," in honor of the three kings or wise men of the East, Caspar, Melchior and Balthazar.

The desire of Mary Miles Minter, screen star, to escape publicity received another jolt when a $50,000 slander suit, filed by her former cook, Katherine Herlihy, came up for trial in Los Angeles. William H. Anderson, former superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, recently released from State's Prison for forgery, received an ovation when he attended services in the Central Methodist Church, of Yonkers, N. Y., his home. H. Crossland Pfaff, a New York engineer, claims to have invented a lightweight steam power plant of high pressure for aviation use that will ensure non-stop flights across the continent at will. "His Royal Highness, Prince Zerdecheño," sometimes self-styled "Emir of Kurdistan," has been ordered deported from the United States for assuming false titles. Hookup Still in Favor With Fans

Old Vario-Coupler and Two Variometer Is Among Best Circuits.

By J. F. RIFKIN

The old vario-coupler and two variometer hookup still holds its place among the best circuits, despite the advent of reflex, neutrodyne and superheterodyne circuits.

Many fans, however, who have used the two-variometer and vario-coupler circuit have reported a great improvement of the set by the use of a condenser across the secondary of the vario-coupler in the place of the usual grid variometer.

The use of this condenser, these fans claim, makes the set more selective and stable. The great number of amateurs who enthusiastically indorse the substitution of the condenser for the grid variometer proves that the condenser idea is more than just a "freak variation."

On the other hand, an equal number of amateurs denounce the condenser and uphold the grid variometer as best. The "king of circuits," they say, is good enough as it is—it doesn't have to be "improved" with any condensers, and it can't be improved, anyhow.

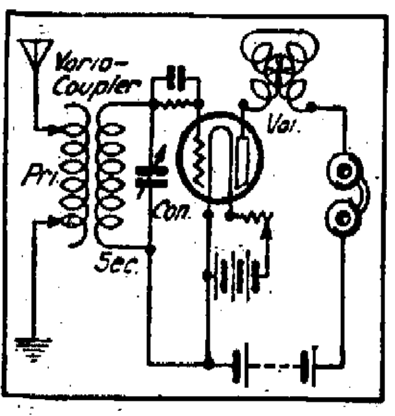

Diagram Showing Circuit Using Variable Condenser.

In the writer's own experience the condenser has given slightly better service than the variometer in the grid circuit, but many of his friends who substituted a condenser for the variometer have gone back to the variometer again, claiming that the variometer is better after all.

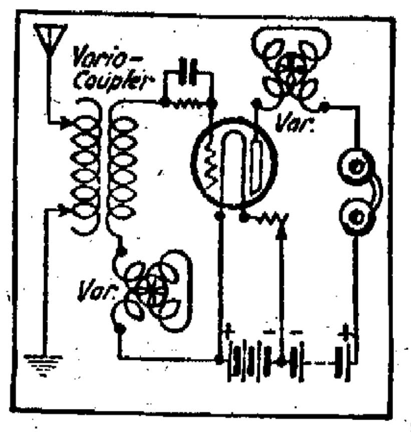

Diagram Showing How Variometer Tunes Grid Circuit.

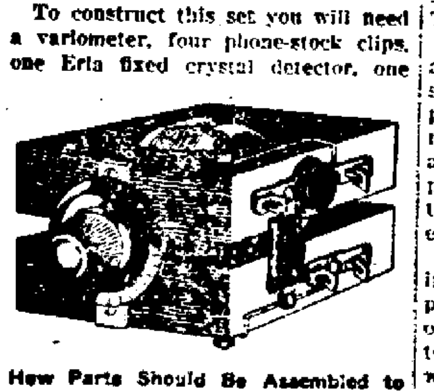
If you are not getting satisfactory results with your two-variometer and vario-coupler set, try substituting a condenser across the vario-coupler secondary instead of the grid variometer.

Need No Knowledge of Radio to Build This

If you have refrained from entering the field of radio listeners until now on account of the cost of a radio set or the difficulty in making one yourself, read this article. A practical receiver can be built without any need of a knowledge of radio, at very small cost.

To construct this set you will need a variometer, four phone-stock clips, one Erla fixed crystal detector, one fixed mica condenser of .0005 mfd. capacity, and three small wood screws. The variometer may be any standard make, the wooden type preferred, due to the fact that you can mount the parts with screws. No panel or cabinet will be necessary and connections need not be soldered.



How Parts Should Be Assembled to Top of Variometer.

The picture diagram shows how the parts should be assembled to the top of the variometer. Fasten the crystal and the clips with the screws, making the connections from the two binding posts by looping the wire underneath the screw heads.

The clip on the left side at the rear is for the aerial lead-in wire. The clip at the right-hand side, at the rear, is for the ground connection. The two clips at the front half of the variometer are for the telephone tips.

The operation of the receiver is very simple. Rotate the dial of the variometer slowly until a station is heard. No further adjustments are necessary. The fixed crystal detector eliminates the need of fussing around with the catwhisker for a sensitive spot. Use a good aerial and ground for best results. The range of this receiver is approximately 30 miles, although greater distances may often be heard.

Protests Against Higher Rates

American Farm Bureau Federation Is Opposed to Increasing Parcel Post Rates to Meet Increased Salaries.

Vigorous protest against the proposed increase in parcel post rates has been made by the American Farm Bureau Federation to Senator Moses, chairman of the Senate Committee on Post Offices, through the Washington representative of the national farmers organization.

A copy of a letter sent to Senator Moses was recently received at the headquarters of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation. This letter reads in part as follows:

"From your familiarity with the establishment of the parcel post, I feel sure you will recall that it was originated with the view, primarily, to serve farmers. I believe no one will dispute the fact that it has been, and still is, a very important factor in connecting the country with the city, and from that standpoint if from no other, it is not strictly a government commercial enterprise, one which should pay dividends or which must necessarily be operated at cost. The feelings of the farmers on this subject, I believe, are directly reflected in the resolution passed December 10 at the last annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation. This read:

"'We are opposed to placing any additional burdens on the parcel post system to meet increased salaries of postal employes or by reason of a reallocation of costs of handling postal matter. The service of the parcel post may well be extended through the more equitable adjustment of the entire postal system.'

"It is proposed to make an increase in the carrying cost of parcel post packages of about 2 cents each. Not only is it proposed to add $6,000,000 to the cost of carrying parcel post, which possibly represents the deficit incurred in that operation, but to add another $6,000,000 for the purpose of paying postal employes a much larger salary than they are now obtaining. And I might add that the postmaster-general has recommended that the parcel post be even more than self-supporting.

"The proposal to saddle on to the users of the parcel post, including all the farmers, a larger proportion of the deficit of the post office than is to be paid by any other class seems, particularly at this time when the farmer's taxes throughout the country have doubled and trebled in the last few years, to be a deliberate attempt to make them carry a still further burden. Further, we believe that part of the parcel post which is carried on the rural delivery is not the losing end of the business. In the city the employe is paid on a time basis and uses government vehicles. In the country he is paid by the year which is virtually by the trip and he provides his own vehicles. The rural carriers would cover their routes whether there was a parcel post or not, and the number of extra packages which they carry by parcel post certainly does not constitute a losing business for the government."

MILTON.

Milton, Jan. 5.—The Christmas supper of the Presbyterian Sunday school given in the Presbyterian Church parlor Monday evening, December 29, was largely attended and greatly enjoyed by all present. There was a special musical program. Mrs. Irving Clarke rendered a beautiful violin solo, "Silent Night," accompanied by Mrs. O. P. Kent on the piano. Mrs. Clarke also sang a solo. Miss Miriam Sears sang in a very pleasing manner a solo, "Bring Them In." Although a very small child she carried the solo all the way through without a discord. There were also recitations by the Misses Eleanor Young and Fannie Sears. The entertainment program was in charge of Mrs. Edward Young. Games were played and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Candy and gifts were given to the children.

The Ladies' Needlecraft Society will hold its monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon, January 7, at the home of Mrs. [illegible] Lyons, at [illegible] o'clock.

LOOK:—HERE'S THE LATEST

Cod Liver Oil Now in Tasteless Tablets

Greatest Flesh Builder.

No more will weak, thin, unfortunate children cry in protest when the nasty, fishy-tasting, horrible-smelling cod liver oil is brought out.

Medical science progresses rapidly, and now you can get at your druggists's real, genuine cod liver oil in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure.

Even the run-down and skinny grown-ups, who ought to take cod liver oil, because it really is the greatest vitamine food and builder of healthy flesh in the world, will feel extremely joyful when they read this welcome news.

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver oil in tablets under another name for several years, but it is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing tablets just as easy as a bottle of cough syrup.

Thin, run-down, anaemic men women and children who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, and if you don't gain 5 pounds in 30 days just get your money back.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in five weeks, another according to her own doctor—another ten pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child, aged nine, twelve pounds in seven months, and now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. All druggists will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only 60 cents for 60 tablets, and don't forget that they are wonder workers for feeble old folks.

Be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine.

He Coughed For Two Years SWORE OFF

After coughing for two years almost continuously a man of considerable means got thin and tired and worn out made his will, and was ready to quit the big game of life.

A friend spoke to him about ERB-I-TOL and now life to him is very sweet indeed.

That's the kind of a cough that is put out of business with amazing speed when the cougher is wise to ERB-I-TOL.

Tough old coughs—persistent coughs—coughs that hang on and rob people of their sleep—those are the kind of coughs ERB-I-TOL likes to tackle.

Many times such coughs linger after the Grip or a heavy cold, and if you have one or know of anyone who has one keep ERB-I-TOL in mind.

It isn't just a cheap sweet cough syrup—it's the best cough remedy—and the best is never cheap. Dealers everywhere can supply you.

HEATING GARAGE VERY IMPORTANT

Jack Frost Can Do Much Damage to Various Parts of Motor Car.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

The cost of building the average private garage exceeds one thousand dollars, hence it cannot be called a cheap structure. The man spending a thousand dollars should give sustained and serious thought to his heating problem, for there are at least three freezing cold months in every year.

Will you use your car all winter, that is, more or less continually, or will you use it but a part of the cold months—say on bright, clear Sundays? Is your garage located close to the house or is it set back so far from the house that it must have individual heating apparatus?

Location Important.

If the garage is close to the house, or constructed as a part of the house, the heating problem is a matter of simple connections running from the house heating system, and the necessary radiators, etc. But if the garage is a separate unit—quite a distance from the house, why, then it leaves only the internal unit.

Insurance regulations are very strict against any open flame or open heater being in the same compartment with gasoline or oils. Consequently, one must figure on a garage heater that will not interfere with insurance companies' policies.

In a general way, there are four available heating methods—direct heaters, such as stoves; hot air; steam and vapor heating.

Hot Air System Favored.

Hot air heating should be considered as a method of ventilating as well, for in any hot air system the arrangement will be such as to ventilate the buildings as well. Since gasoline and oil vapors are heavy and tend to go down to the floor, rather than rise as do other vapors, garage ventilation is difficult. As these vapors are dangerous, as is also carbon monoxide of the exhaust, this ventilation is especially important, for in the cold months the garage would be kept closed even when working on the car. Hot air then should have double consideration and in a general way it is the lowest-priced system aside from direct heating. Direct heating is not generally used for garages.

Hot water and steam systems are recommended by insurance men. The placing of the radiators can be decided by the garage owner.

There is nothing complicated about heating the private garage, nor is it an expensive proposition. It is a simple matter that anyone can work out for himself in a very short time. Having done so, he will wonder why he didn't do it sooner.

Jack Frost can do lots of things to an unprotected car. Frozen radiators and cracked water-jackets are expensive propositions, much more costly than a garage heating system.

Leave Oil in Stored Car

When preparing to store the car for the winter, it is generally understood that the water system should be drained and the fuel system likewise. On the other hand, the oil compartments in motor, clutch, gearset and rear axle should not be drained. The oil remaining in these parts actually preserves them during the period of innocuous desuetude.

Such parts as joints in the steering system, universals, rims, etc., should be greased to prevent rusting.

Winding a Spring

To wind a spring in a lathe is a simple matter; to wind it without a lathe is also a simple matter if one knows how. Select a bolt having threads about corresponding to the pitch desired in the spring. Hold the head of the bolt firmly in a vise, pinch one end of the wire tight and wind the other end around the bolt. The threads of the bolt will guide the wire so that an equally spaced spring will be formed.

He'd Hold Motorists to 30 Miles an Hour

Recommendation that automobiles be limited to 30 miles an hour as maximum speed under any conditions, and that the limit be 20 miles in city or town limits, was made by Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles of Boston, Mass., in a communication to a legislative committee which asked for his views.

Any person convicted of driving an automobile while under influence of liquor should receive a jail sentence, and the judge should have no discretion, he added.

Registration Indicates Many Farmers Use Autos

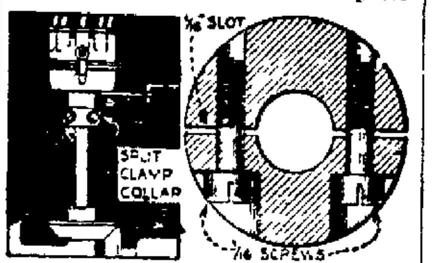
Based on a total registration of passenger cars, trucks and busses amounting to 16,500,000 in the United States, it is interesting to note that 30 per cent of all cars are on farms. A large share of the farm-owned automobiles are owned by middle western farmers, as 85 per cent of them are car owners, while 58 per cent of the Atlantic coast farmers are owners.

On the basis of 16,500,000 cars in the country, a total of 4,900,000 of them will be found on farms. Miller tire statisticians figure from this that there are 70 cars for each 1,000 persons or one car to 14.3 persons.

Almost half of the total registration is in cities of 100,000 and over and in towns from 1,000 to 5,000 population. In other words, 75 per cent of the total cars are on farms in towns from 1,000 to 5,000 population and in cities of 100,000 population and over. This leaves but 25 per cent of the total registration, or about 4,000,000 cars, in towns and cities from 5,000 to 100,000 population.

Gears Cause of Trouble by Jumping Out of Mesh

Distributer gears of certain cars cause considerable trouble by jumping out of mesh when the car hits a bump or depression in the road. This can be remedied by fastening a split collar to the vertical shaft just under the distributer, as shown. The clamp collar is made of steel drilled and tapped as indicated, and fitted with two small screws. In this way a permanent repair can be made without dismantling any of the motor parts.—Popular Science Monthly.



Collar Holds Gears in Mesh.

Occasional Tire Change Is Wise Plan for Owner

There is a tendency among automobile drivers towards recklessness in the use of their tires because of the greatly-increased mileage being secured on present-day tires, as compared to the best tires of a few years ago.

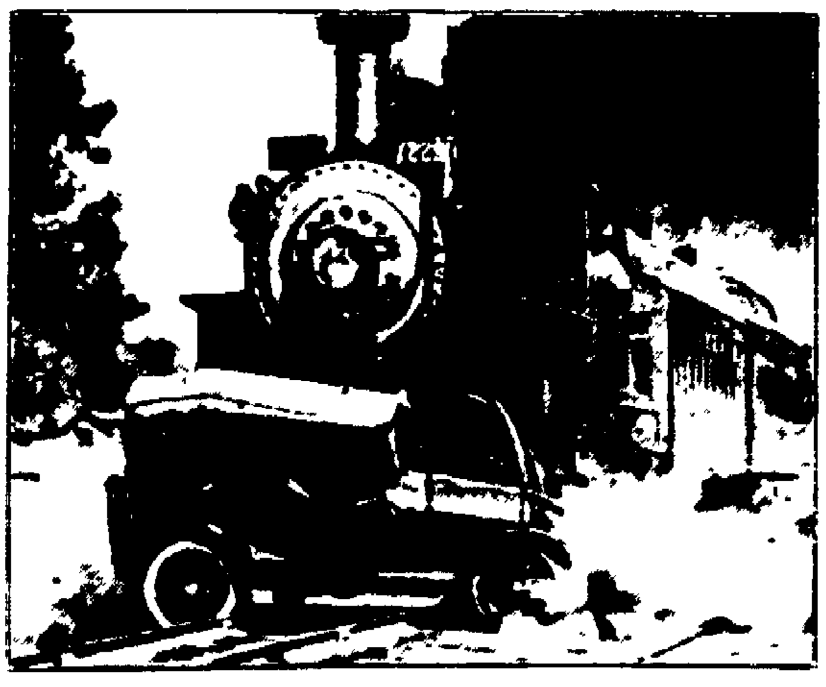
There is mighty little economy in such practice. It is a pretty good plan, even if the automobile driver does not find it necessary to change tires because of punctures or blowouts, to change them occasionally and, by all means, to inspect them carefully for cuts and sand blisters.

Cuts, especially, spread rapidly. The use of a little cut filler in time will add miles of usage to any tire. If taken in time it will prevent sand blisters and more than pay the owner for the little time devoted to making the repair.

Uniform Laws Wanted

At the present time all the states of the Union have different automobile laws, and it is impossible for any one motorist to be familiar with all these regulations. There is agitation for a uniform law governing the operation of motor vehicles.

WARNING FOR CARELESS MOTOR DRIVERS



Four automobiles were wrecked when they were struck by a Southern Pacific "train" at Florence, Cal. There was no loss of life as it was done in order that newsreel photographers might thus be able to convey to the screen, and thus to the public, the danger and folly of attempting to beat trains to railroad crossings. This striking object lesson shown in the photograph is expected to be a notable contribution to the "Safety First" campaign being constantly waged by railroads, automobile clubs and other agencies.

Causes for Gratitude

IDEAL PARK.

Ideal Park, Jan. 5.—The entire community were grieved to learn of the death of William Slyvert of Mt. Tremper who died Christmas day, after a lingering illness. Mr. Slyvert was an old war veteran, having served in the Civil War. The funeral was held at his home "Maple Villa," the Rev. Ingersoll conducting the service. The florals were many and beautiful. Mr. Slyvert has been well liked by his neighbors and friends. A large number of relatives from out of town attended the funeral. Deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved wife and family.

E. E. Mathews and sons, Clyde and Hilton, of Kingston, spent a recent week end at their bungalow here.

Mrs. John Harrison and family called on Mr. and Mrs. L. E. DeVall Sunday afternoon.

George Lane of Willow took dinner with friends in this place Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kelsey of Samsonville are at their cottage during the ice harvesting.

Miss Mabelle and Helen DeVall were callers at Wittenberg Sunday afternoon.

A number from this place attended the Christmas tree exercises at Mt. Tremper Hall. A very enjoyable time was spent by all. At the closing of the entertainment Santa distributed gifts to each child present. Much credit is due their teacher Mrs. DeSilva, for the training she gave the children.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. DeVall entertained friends from New York over New Year's.

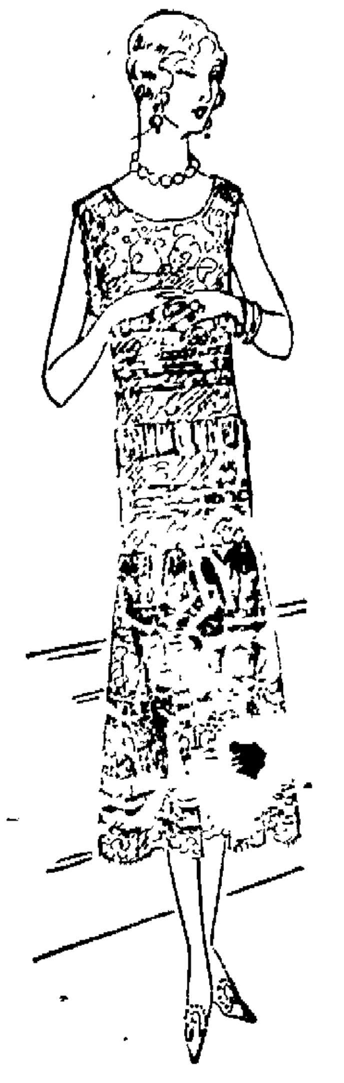
BLACK SATIN AND COCOA LACE.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

The smart private dressmakers are now working on their collections for southern wear, and while considerable accent has been placed on pastel colorings for costumes designed for this purpose, the gayest of gay hues are spoken of at more than one establishment. This applies to both silks and cottons. The former are in crepe weaves, for the most part many brightly striped designs being used. Flowered chiffons will be important evening fabrics.

Among the cottons, broderies Anglais is used, dyed in charming tones of rose or yellow.

Incidentally, the ensemble is quoted as quite as important for spring as it has been for fall—perhaps even more so.



Dresses of materials—lace, for instance with crepe—developed in combinations frequently sponsor redingote lines that give an ensemble effect, the lace being used either for the inside panel or for the coat section. On similar lines are ensemble frocks of sheer crepes over printed satin, the coat lines accented in several instances by borders of narrow Valenciennes lace and front tie belts of the fabric suggesting a lowered waistline. Cart wheels of taffeta ribbon ofter provide a hem border.

The combination of black satin and deep cocoa colored lace is effectively employed in formal afternoon dresses. In frocks of this type the prevailing straight silhouette is repeatedly modified by apron front effects widened toward the hem by means of lace godets.

Some of the more formal expressions achieve rich effects by the frequent use of embroidered net, point Venice, filet and Irish laces in cocoa and ecru shades. Although a number of dresses are developed entirely of lace, and posed over contrasting or matching satin slips, combinations of the laces with chiffon or satin in blonde colorings are of foremost importance.

Regents Advise More State Money

An increase in the allowance made by the state for the support of public schools is the recommendation of the Board of Regents of The University of the State of New York to relieve the financial difficulties of many communities. An explanation of this was made by Commissioner of Education Frank Pierrepont Graves following a meeting of the Board of Regents held on January 1, 1925. The statement by Doctor Graves follows:

"The Regents after careful investigation, as every city, village and district superintendent knows, have come to the conclusion that the state should grant larger allowances for necessary teachers' salaries in each city, village, and necessary rural school district. The constitution commands the legislature of the state to maintain our common schools, but instead of doing that, a little less than one-fifth of the amount necessary to maintain them is now appropriated by the state and consequently even large cities hampered by constitutional limitations and many villages and rural school districts find it almost impossible to support their schools properly in these days of greatly increased costs, which have more than doubled the cost of many of our schools. To have good schools, however, we must have good teachers, for such teachers are the soul of our schools: hence the state should contribute at least two-fifths of the cost of our schools everywhere; the state contribution, however, to be spent only for the salaries of necessary teachers. Investigation will still continue as to larger tax units in rural sections and as to what shall be done with exceptionaly weak rural schools. Further investigation is also necessary as to souces from which the state can raise the necessary additional moneys for the schools without increasing school taxes upon real estate, for real estate taxes are often altogether too heavy at the present time. After these further investigations and in the near future, further conferences of the Regents will be held to decide upon the unfinished details of this plan. Of course the Regents can only suggest a remedy for our present school difficulties, but it is for the legislature and the governor to amend, or say yes or no to what is proposed."

Ulster County Society Dinner

Ninth Annual Dinner at Waldorf-Astoria on January 24—Admit Forty-two to Membership the Past Year.

The ninth annual dinner of the Ulster County Society will be held in the Waldorf-Astoria, Fifth avenue and Thirty-fourth street, New York, on Saturday evening, January 24, 1925.

The dinner will be served promptly at 7:30 o'clock. The usual reception will be held, beginning at 6:30. This hour given over to the renewal of old acquaintances and the making of new friends always brings a great deal of happiness and pleasure.

The guest-of-honor will be Brigadier-General LeRoy Eltinge, who spent his boyhood in Kingston attending old No. 11 School and Kingston Academy. The speakers will be General Louis W. Stotesbury, a former President of the Dutchess County Society, and Leon Forst, formerly of Kingston, and one of the original fourteen organizers of the society. Honorary President George S. Clay will preside.

At the annual meeting held last November George S. Clay and John T. Loughran were unanimously elected honorary president and president respectively. The other officers were re-elected.

The society continues to enjoy a steady and wholesome growth. During the past year a gain of 42 was made in membership, bringing the total up to 475.

Youth, 17, Admits Killing Mother

RICHARD SMITH.

Richard Smith, seventeen-year-old Philadelphia youth, has confessed that he killed his mother, Mrs. Mary Smith, fifty-seven, who was found dead in bed with two bullet wounds in her body, after a New Year's Eve family party at her home. Although he steadfastly declined to say why he shot his sick parent while the other members of the family made merry on the floor below, relatives say it was because she refused his demand for $50.

HOW LIZZIE GOT HER CAR

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"YOU'RE not afraid, Lizzie?"

"Not a bit of it, father."

"All this talk about maraudin' bands and the like over in the next township is probably a scare. I'll have mother and the girls back home by ten o'clock. And say, Lizzie, that thing you've set your heart on—an automobile."

"Yes, father," murmured Lizzie, a faint little pucker at her lips.

"I'm going to look at one up at Norwich tonight. If it's reasonable, I may think it over."

Old Daniel Bangs drove off in the rickety family surrey with slow patient Dobbin attached. Lizzie waved her hand after him in a forlorn sort of way. That word "automobile" had touched a sore spot in Lizzie's heart.

There was only one young man in the district whom Lizzie loved and an automobile had parted them. Ned Darrow had been keeping company with her for a year. His folks lived on the next farm one-half a mile distant and he worked in a garage at Norwich. The charm of Lizzie's company brought him home regularly every evening. There was a constant companionship and consequent happiness.

Then the Bellows family did what nearly all the progressive farmers in the district were doing—bought an automobile. And then for three evenings Ned did not put in an appearance at the Bangs home. A gossipy neighbor dropped in to tell Mrs. Bangs of "the scand'lous doings down at the Bellows farm." Three afternoons in succession "that young Darrow had come there to take out Miss Olive in the new automobile!"

"If it was anybody but Olive Bellows!" Lizzie had said to herself resentfully, as she recalled that a year previous Ned had been very friendly with the young lady in question.

The fourth evening Ned came to the Bangs home. Mrs. Bangs treated him rather coldly and Lizzie went up to her room without seeing him, reporting a sick headache.

The next day when Miss Bellows drove by alone proudly exhibiting her skill as an expert chauffeur, Lizzie went straight to her father.

"We must get an auto, papa," she insisted. "Everybody else is and we don't want to be back numbers."

Mr. Bangs was indulgent and the result was that several salesmen from the town brought up their machines. Lizzie had several rides. The prices charged staggered the thrifty, careful farmer, however, and no bargain was consummated.

So that evening, left alone to wait for the return of the family from a relative's, Lizzie had some rather bitter reflections. She was really spiteful because Miss Bellows could parade around in a new shiny four-cylinder. She felt resentful toward her lover for a new reason.

He had sent her a note chiding her for declining to see him when he called. Ned added a line saying that he would like to make an explanation of some things that his lady love had probably misunderstood.

Lizzie would possibly have relented and would have sent for him, but not two hours since the Bellows machine had come whizzing down the road, Miss Olive at the wheel and the perfidious Ned by her side.

"I shall never speak to him again!" resolved Lizzie, as her father drove away.

There were no lights in the house and she closed and locked the front door. Then she went out into the garden and planned to sit in the rustic summer house and wait there till the folks returned.

That cherished spot, however, brought up poignant memories of hours when Ned had been by her side. Lizzie in a desolate, unhappy way, went way over to a corner of the garden where a network of vines inclosed an old-fashioned tree seat.

The loneliness and seclusion led to tears now. Lizzie fairly cried herself to sleep.

It must have been an hour later when the chug-chug of a machine aroused her.

"It's an automobile and it's stopping here," she murmured. "They are strangers and they have driven the machine into the shadow of the trees. Oh, dear!"

Lizzie shivered as she thought of the reports from the next township, of a band of robbers who had raided a score of farmhouses while the occupants were absent.

Two men silently and mysteriously stole past the gate, glanced up at the grim, silent house, went around to its side and then the affrighted Lizzie heard a window raised.

"Oh, they are robbers, sure enough!" she gasped. "They have broken into the house. What shall I do?"

A sudden inspiration came to her mind as she glanced at the automobile. She did not believe she could quite run one alone, but she knew a good deal about its construction from casual observation.

"I can creep under the fence, reach the machine and they can't see me," she planned. "Then I'll hurry down the road and give the alarm."

Lizzie reached the stalled machine. She leaped nimbly to its step. For only a moment her hand was busy groping over its mechanism. A little flutter of excitement and satisfaction escaped her lips as she slipped something into her pocket. Then Lizzie sped down the shadowy road with fleetness.

"Oh, dear! I wish I had gone the other way—but then the robbers might have seen me," she breathed, as at a turn the first window light that showed was in the Darrow farmhouse, a quarter of a mile away.

Lizzie halted as she came directly up to the house. There was a light in only one room and beyond its open window sat the only occupant of the house. It was Ned, at a table, writing. Lizzie faltered. Then the urgency of the occasion impelled her to action. She ran into the full radius of the bright lamplight streaming out into the garden.

"There's robbers at our house and the folks are all away," she cried out, and Ned was on his feet in an instant. He was outside, a gun in hand, before Lizzie realized it.

"Tell me all about it as we hurry back," he directed, and she thrilled to feel the firm, steady clasp of his hand on her arm as he urged her to the road.

Lizzie could never tell afterward how she blurted out her story or how she acted during that wild run. She lost all her resentment, once again in that dear championship.

"There they are," she fluttered, as they came in sight of home and the figures of two men were to be observed moving about the automobile. The machine was loaded with plunder they had taken from the house.

Ned shouted at them and then fired a shot in the air. That was the last of the robbers.

"I don't see why they didn't make off with the machine," he remarked.

"Why, I had taken away the spark key," explained Lizzie, producing the article in question.

"You wise little woman!" exclaimed Ned admiringly. "Come back to the old loving arms, darling," he added, "while I tell you a little story about another automobile."

And then he entirely satisfied Lizzie that it was in the line of work necessary and paid for that he had been so much in the company of Olive Bellows.

The robbers never returned to claim their machine. By right of the law of jetsam it became Lizzie's automobile, and Ned Darrow continued to be Lizzie's lover.

WOMAN'S COURAGE FOILS BANDITS

Grapples With Armed Robbers Who Attempt to Hold Up Her Bank.

UNARMED, WINS LONG FIGHT

One Bandit Killed and Other Wounded When Men Come to Rescue—Story Told at National Meeting of Bankers.

When the wave of crime against banks, which has reached unprecedented proportions, was under discussion at the recent meeting of the American Bankers Association at Chicago, and defense measures were up for consideration, the bankers were told how one resolute woman defended herself against two armed desperadoes in her little Western bank. The woman was Mrs. Mary Garlinghouse, cashier of the State Bank of Vera, Oklahoma, which she conducts single-handed. Her own story, as she told it in a report to the protective authorities of the Association, follows:

"While I was posting my ledger, with my back to the door, I heard a commotion. When I turned around there were two men back of the counter, with handkerchiefs over their faces. The larger made a jump for my gun, before I realized what was happening. The robbers each had a gun pointed at me, and one said, 'Lay down or I will shoot you!' I said, 'I will not lay down and you will not shoot me.' This conversation was repeated several times. I told them to cut out their foolishness.

"A man who was in the corridor when the bandits came laid down on the floor, face down. I tried to argue with the robbers and they began to get rough, but something within me seemed to realize that they were getting confused. I kept thinking that some one would come in or see us.

"The larger man got busy with the money, while the smaller one took care of me. He jerked me to my [illegible] and hit me over the head. This [illegible] my glasses and I lifted my hand, holding it in front of his face and telling him to wait a minute. I took my glasses off and put them on the table. Lifting my hand caused this man to look up and he saw we were observed from across the street. Then he saw Constable Mosby, with his gun, and said to the man who was gathering the money, 'Don, we are seen, we must make our getaway!' He then grabbed me rather roughly and said: 'Come on here! You are coming along!'

Struggles With Robber

"Here is where our struggle began. All the time we fought over his gun, I did not try to take it away from him, but kept moving it from one side to the other, and of course he was determined to point it straight at me. I told him, 'I will not go and I am not afraid of you. You will not shoot me!'

"We fought to the back door of the bank. When we got there, he raised his arm to fire at Mosby. I grabbed him around the neck, and he fired before I could get his hand. I am positive that this man was never hugged so tightly, nor ever will be, as I hugged him, realizing that I must fight for my life. The man tried his level best to kill me. What the other man was doing I do not know. My man was trying to pull me out the back door to their car, which was still running. I was determined he should not.

"R. C. Lapsley, the mayor, or Ed. Mosby shot the man in the arm. There was a jerk and out the door we went. Things were coming my way now. I pulled the robber into the weeds half on his back and half on his left side.

"The robber finally said, 'I will give up.' I said, 'Give me your gun.' He answered, 'I will not: I know you will shoot me.' So the struggle kept on. We got back on our feet. I meant to have his gun and would fight him until I got it. We fought through the back room behind the counter. He begged me not to take him, and I asked him again for his gun and he said, 'No, I know you will shoot me.' We struggled through the front door and then Constable Mosby said, 'Drop your gun or I will shoot you.' The bandit gave up and the men took charge of him.

One Bandit Killed

"I wondered about the other bandit and started to look for him and found him in the closet in the back of the bank dying. R. C. Lapsley told me afterwards that when the bandit and I lurched through the back door the larger man, with his gun in his right hand and the sack of money in his left, stepped up to the door. They both fired at once. The robber dropped his gun and the money, but they could not see what became of him.

"If all towns had as brave men as we have here, bank robbing would be a thing of the past. You can understand the remarkable marksmanship that was displayed, when I tell you that in our struggle at the back of the bank the men took several shots at the robber, but were very careful not to hit me. The robber got a shot in his right arm and a glancing shot in his left.

"All during the shooting and fighting, I felt confident I would get the best of my man. I felt that the man would not shoot me, and like all Western women did not lose my nerve. Bank robbers as a rule, are cowards and if one shows that he is not afraid of them they will lose their nerve."

Balloons Used to Take "Soundings" of the Sky

Sixty years ago two men managed to rise in a balloon to a height of five miles above the earth's surface and for many years that ascent remained a record.

In those days it was taken for granted that the higher you went the cooler it got, but nothing was known for certain until, in 1902, a French meteorologist began to experiment by sending up small balloons, to each of which was attached a self-registering thermometer.

Most of these were lost, but some were recovered, and the fact was revealed that in every case after six and one-half miles the steady fall in temperature ceased abruptly. Indeed, a slight rise was often noticed above that height.

Since then these small balloons sondes, as they are called, have been used all over the world. They are made of rubber and constructed so that when they burst they turn into parachutes, which bring the instruments entrusted to them safely back to earth. These balloons have been sent up to 46,000 feet.

Pilot balloons, which are larger, and which are used for testing air currents of the upper atmosphere, have been sent up to 82,000 feet, and have proved that at great altitudes there are winds blowing at 132 miles an hour—that is, faster than anything near the earth's surface.

These little balloons are teaching us all sorts of interesting things about the top of the weather. Up to the present century we were able to study only the bottom of it.

One odd fact is that the coldest regions do not lie over the poles but over the equator. The greatest degree of cold ever recorded—112 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit—was found at a height of 12 miles above equatorial Africa.

Retaliatory

When I first moved to this suburb I went to return the call of a friend. She was not at home, but her parents were. It seemed her mother had a pet grievance. Her daughter, who was devoted to music, had not married.

We were hardly seated when the women began: "You girls don't have good times at all nowadays. When I was young we had the boys over every evening. And we got husbands, too," this accompanied by a vigorous shake of her head.

Not thinking, I replied: "Oh, well, maybe you weren't so particular."

And her husband was sitting right there.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Character in Handwriting

As the handwriting of a person will show the character, so will it show the occupation, and this in more pronounced fashion if the writer specializes. Writers quite unconsciously draw the forms of the things in which they are particularly interested. Thus, the optician makes lenses and springs; the poultry breeder draws eggs and sitting hens; the dog breeder throws out tails and padded feet, while the pig breeder's writing is full of wriggling tails. These specialized writings are easily determined by the ordinary person without special training.

Gray Eyes and Sin

Among the Arabs there is a popular superstition that gray eyes are a sign of sin. The belief is founded on a passage in the Koran which classes them as a possession of the wicked.

Income Tax Has Never Had Great Popularity

Imaginative persons seem never to tire of conjecturing as to which of modern man's accomplishments would most astound our ancestors.

The motorcar or the airplane is usually the favorite, but if one could select a chosen few, comprising many of the kings of England along with their councilors, probably the achievement which would bulk largest in their eyes would be the collection of the income tax.

Starting with Edward III, who distinguished himself by collecting $130,000 by a graduated capital levy in 1321 without causing a revolution, the history of the efforts of the rulers of our race to yoke us with this burden is interesting. Edward III's levy was very modest, says A. G. D. in the Winnipeg Free Press. It ranged from $30 to 8 cents according to the position of the taxpayer.

Richard II, [illegible] grandson—almost [illegible] his throne before he had sat [illegible] on it, because he levied a still more modest tax, ranging [illegible] cents. Wat Tyler, before he was murdered, so convinced the rulers of Britain that an income tax was not a practical form of taxation that it was more than 200 years before such a levy was again attempted.

Safe Makers Only One Jump Ahead of Thieves

Recent [illegible] ments and inventions [illegible] forecast an end to [illegible]. But to bring [illegible] not so easy, as [illegible] American. What [illegible] immediately is [illegible] of devising some metal [illegible] capable of resisting [illegible] and of the various types of the acetylene torch, a high temperature device which will eat its fiery [illegible] metal defenses once thought absolutely impregnable.

The contest between the safe cracker and the safe maker is fast resolving itself into the old problem of the irresistible force and the immovable body—with the odds in favor of the safe cracker.

Since the beginning of safe making the [illegible] have had two sets of [illegible]—the burglars who use the [illegible] and those who use explosives. Each new improvement of safes has been met, on the part of the burglar, with [illegible] for successfully attacking it.

Cholko Died By Drowning

District Attorney Frederick G. Traver stated today that the autopsy performed upon the body of Captain Joseph Cholko of Poughkeepsie, whose body was recovered from the Rondout creek on Monday, showed that the barge captain had met death by drowning. He had been missing since Christmas eve and the authorities believe that on trying to board his barge, the Greater New York, moored in the Rondout creek at the foot of Sycamore street, he made a misstep and fell between the dock and the barge.

"Ma" Ferguson Picks Republican

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Temple, Texas, Jan. 6.—Roy I. Tennant, prominent in Republican politics for 20 years, was announced today, through former Governor James S. Ferguson, as Mrs. Miriam Ferguson's choice for chairman of the state board of control. This carries with it the powers of a state purchasing agent. Ferguson and Tennant have been close friends for years, although opposed politically.

Not a woman was included in the first batch of appointments announced today. There was no announcement on the secretary of state—known to have been offered to a woman, but held up through delay in her acceptance—or on the state banking commissioner.

Fire Destroys Rescue Mission

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Lives of more than fifty persons were endangered in a blaze which destroyed the interior of the Rescue Mission at 511 East Washington street, today.

Superintendent Richard D. Murphy, who was awakened by the crash of falling light fixtures, narrowly escaped suffocation after becoming confused in the smoke filled rooms. Groping blindly, he managed to reach a window just as he was at the point of collapse.

Members of his family and lodgers from the mission dormitory in another part of the building assisted him to safety.

The interior of the building is utterly ruined. Costly fittings which made the place known from coast to coast, during the reign of Ada Stanton who conducted it while Syracuse was in the hey-day of the era of revelry, were ruined by the flames and water and insurance adjusters are unable to state the exact amount of the loss.

Costly chandeliers of cut glass which are almost beyond duplication, inlaid floors of matched wood the like of which are not found in the most palatial homes today were consumed or wrecked beyond repair.

Harder-Golgoskie.

A very pretty wedding took place at the Church of the Immaculate Conception on Delaware avenue on Sunday afternoon when Miss Caroline Golgoskie became the bride of Frederick C. Harder, a popular salesman for A. H. Gildersleeve of Broadway, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The church was artistically decorated with evergreens and flowers. Miss T. Gehringer, organist of the church, rendered Lohengrin's wedding march as the bridal party entered the church. The bride was charmingly gowned in white canton crepe and wore a veil of tulle with a wreath of orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of white rose buds and sweet peas. She was attended by her sister, Miss Catherine Golgoskie, as bridesmaid, who was gowned in yellow georgette with ostrich trimmings and wore a picture hat to match. She carried a bouquet of pink rose buds and sweet peas. The best man was Roger Peters, a cousin of the groom. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ignatius Bialdyga, pastor of the church, and at the close of the ceremony Mendelsohn's wedding march was rendered by Miss Gehringer. A reception followed the wedding ceremony at the bride's home, being attended by the bridal party and the members of the immediate families of the bridal couple. The house beautifully decorated, the color scheme being yellow and white. The bride was the recipient of a number of artistic and useful gifts including a large check, linen, cut glass and furniture. Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Harder left on an extended wedding trip to New York and points of interest in the south.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

The first anniversary Mass in memory of the late Celia Dolan was celebrated at St. Mary's Church on Monday, January 6.

George E. Burger, formerly of Ruby, died in New York on January 3. The body was brought to Mt. Marion Monday afternoon and taken to the Reformed Church where funeral services were held. Interment was in the Mt. Marion cemetery. Mr. Burger was in his 59th year.

The funeral of Mrs. Elting Polhemus, formerly of New Paltz, was held from St. Joseph's Church in that village on Friday morning, January 2, with interment in Lloyd Cemetery. Mrs. Polhemus lived in New Paltz for some time but moved from the village a few months ago. She is survived by her husband, a daughter and son.

Harvey Whitaker of Mt. Marion, who went to West Palm Beach, Florida, with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Dederick, last month, died there on Sunday, January 4. The body will be brought north and placed in the mortuary chapel vault in the Mt. Marion cemetery until spring when it will then be interred. Mrs. Whitaker died in Florida last winter.

The funeral of Andrew Killian, who died at his residence, No. 492 Delaware avenue on Wednesday last, following a short illness, was held from the late home on Saturday morning, at 9:30 o'clock and from the Church of the Immaculate Conception at 10 o'clock, where a high Mass of requiem was celebrated at the high altar by the Rev. Ignatius Bialdyga with requiem Mass also being sung at each of the side altars, by visiting priests, who were friends of the Killian family. The large church edifice was filled to overflowing, the deceased having been one of the best known residents of that section of the city in which he resided and was held in high respect by all who knew him. The beautiful and numerous floral tributes, testified to his high standing among his friends. The members of the Sacred Heart Society, of which the deceased was a member, attended the funeral in a body, and presented a most impressive sight with their entire number marching in the funeral cortege and acting as an honorary escort. Six of their members acted as casket bearers. The interment was in the family plot in Mt. Calvary Cemetery, while the Rev. Ignatius Bialdyga, assisted by a missionary father conducted the committal services.

In Police Court.

Meant All She Said

They were evidently married and must have disagreed before they came to the lecture the other evening. For every once in a while she would deliver some cutting remark to him. But the bolt came when he shifted his chair so that it was directly in front of her. But he still tried to be polite. "Is it hard for you to look over my shoulder in public?" he asked.

"No," was the cutting answer, "but a bit harder than it is overlooking your faults in private."—Indianapolis News.

McGrath Returns But Keeps Silent

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Refusing to talk to a detective who called to interview him, H. Faulkner MacGrath, secretary and foster-brother of Harold MacGrath, the novelist, 1618 James street, is in seclusion at the author's home today.

Detective Louis McMahon was sent to the MacGrath home when news of "Ted" MacGrath's return, after a disappearance of three days, reached Chief Cadin. Detective McMahon was told by a member of the household that "Ted" MacGrath was home from a business trip to the west, and did not care to talk to anyone.

PORT EWEN

Port Ewen, Jan. 6.—Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Freer and daughter Janice and Miss Estella Freer of Broadway, moved Monday to Hasbrouck avenue, Kingston.

The Port Ewen Fire Department will hold a masquerade at Pythian Hall Friday evening, January 9. The Imperial Orchestra of Kingston will furnish music for dancing. All interested in a jolly good time are sure to attend.

Mrs. J. A. Stadt of New York city is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Halliday on Bowne street.

Fred Boyce of Bowne street is the guest of his brother, Gatzey Boice, at Glenford, N. Y.

Mrs. Mary Hogan of Broadway, who has been ill, is improving.

Mrs. John Halliday of Bowne street is ill of pleurisy. Dr. G. W. Ross is the attending physician.

Silas W. Perrine who has been ill over four weeks is improving slowly, and is able to sit up a short while at a time.

Week of prayer service will be held in the Reformed Church this evening at 7:30 o'clock. The Rev. M. F. Luther, pastor of the church, will preach. His theme is, Prayer for the Rising Generation." All parents are especially urged to be present. Everybody is welcome to these nightly services.

Marvelous Natural Bridge

The Rainbow natural bridge is located within the Navajo Indian reservation near the southern boundary of Utah, and spans a canyon and a small stream which drains the northwestern slope of the Navajo mountains. This bridge is unique in that it is not only a symmetrical arch below but presents also a curved surface above, thus roughly suggesting a rainbow. Its height above the surface of the water is 309 feet, and its span is 278 feet. The bridge and its neighboring canyon walls are gorgeously clothed in mottled red and yellow. The Indian story concerning its origin is that a rainbow was turned to stone, thus permitting certain hero gods to escape flood waters in the canyon. Devout Indians will not pass under this bridge without saying their prayers. The Indian name was Nagee-lid Nonne-zoshi—"The rainbow turned to stone."

Black Maria

Everybody knows that prison vans are called "Black Marias." The reason for that appellation is given in the following terms in the Star of November 28, 1874, in the form of a letter from a correspondent:

"About 1835 or 1840 there resided in New York city a lady of African descent and bacchanalian habits bearing the classical name of Maria. Her sprees were frequent and glorious. It came to pass that whenever she indulged she was always nabbed by the police. They invariably had to put her in a wagon to take her to the station house. This thing occuring so often, the vehicle was called Black Maria's carriage. Therefrom the van used to convey prisoners came to be called the Black Maria."—Washington Star.

Exceptions to Theory

The recapitulation theory is the theory that a parallel exists between the embryonic development of an individual and the historical evolution of its race. This parallel is explained by the theory of evolution, according to which, in the words of Sedgwick, "the development history of the individual appears to be a short and simplified repetition, or, in a certain sense, a recapitulation of the course of development of the species." The theory is correct to a limited extent in the case of many animals, but there are many deviations due to the adaptation to environment, abbreviation of the course of development and other influences.

"Hard" and "Soft" Water

Hard water is water which contains dissolved in it certain substances which interfere with the action of soap by forming with it an insoluble compound or curd. The hardness of natural water is principally due to the salts of calcium and magnesium, especially calcium carbonate, which produces temporary hardness, removable by boiling, and calcium sulphate, which causes permanent hardness. Soft water is characterized by the practical absence of substances which prevent the formation of lather with soaps.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 6.—Speculative industrial stocks retraced a good portion of their lost ground today and in some instances added a little for good measure. The best records of the day were made by the railroad stocks, which under the leadership of New York Central, Atchison, Reading and Southern Pacific were in higher price ground for most of the session. New York Central and Atchison shattered their best previous performances for a few years back, the latter at 123¾ making a new high record since 1916.

There were few traces of the heavy selling of industrial shares which so upset values in the last hour on Monday. Short lines were taken in immediately after the opening of the market and little selling resulted from the impairment of margin accounts. Stocks which bore the brunt of Monday's selling and declined from 5 to 15 points, were unable to make up their entire losses, but active industrials which declined only a point or two made a better showing. The rails on the other hand pushed through the best price levels of the previous sessions of the year to date. The market turned dull and the volume of trading in the first three hours was nearly half a million shares less than in the same period yesterday.

The movement in railroad stocks had the double stimulus of a favorable array of current net earnings and another dividend increase in one of the most active common stocks on the board, Atchison. Directors of this company at their meeting in New York today boosted the quarterly dividend from 1½ to 1¾ per cent, despite repeated denial by individual directors that such action was contemplated.

Nor were the railroad companies alone in raising dividends. American Smelting and Refining was placed on a six per cent annual dividend basis and a special disbursement to stock holders was ordered by the directors of the Fajardo Sugar Company. Call money flowed into Wall street today and the official rate was lowered to 3 per cent, the lowest since December 23, and cotton recovered about 30 points.

Price movements in the industrial and specialty stocks were somewhat mixed in the late trading. Professionals were ready to sell on profit taking and switching to other stocks resulted in simultaneous rallies and declines in stocks equally popular as speculative mediums. Copper stocks responded to the boosting of copper metal to 15⅛ cents a pound and metal shares in general reflected the advance in prices of lead and tin. Equipment stocks rallied under the lead of Car and Foundry which sold up to 200 for a recovery of 8 points from Monday's close. Radio Gorporation was comparatively quiet but the bulk of sales were made nearly 2 points above the opening price of 66.

May Sue Ford for Million for Libel

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Aaron Sapiro of Chicago, who is attending the meeting here of the National Council of Cooperative Marketing Association announced today that he intended to file a libel suit for $1,000,000 against Henry Ford, basing the action on articles appearing in Ford's paper, the Dearborn Independent. The article alleged Sapiro said that his activities in the cooperative movement were part of an attempt of a group of Jewish financiers, to control American agriculture.

Sapiro said he had written a letter to Ford demanding formal retraction of the Independent's charges.

Among the "false charges" which Sapiro said had been made by Ford's paper was that he had engaged in teaching Communistic principles to school children. The articles appeared he said, from April 12 to December 13, 1924.

Cupid Pitching

Judge Summerfield was deploring the lightness with which people marry and separate. It's getting to be nothing but a game and a fast-played game at that. One of these days I expect we'll have a matrimonial world series.

"Only the other day a young friend came to me all radiant, crying: 'Betty has accepted me; Betty has accepted me.'

"The following day I met him again and noting the downcast look asked what was the trouble.

"'She changed her mind,' he explained. 'I asked her why and she wouldn't give any reason and then she said:

"'Tell you what! Propose to me again, and we'll make it the best two out of three.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Napoleonic Mementoes

Napoleon's birthplace, the house at Ajaccio, Corsica, has been given to the French government by Prince Victor Napoleon, who, in return, has received the Roman sword of honor presented to Napoleon when he was First Consul, and the superb clock by Clodion. These formed part of the personal estate of Napoleon III and were the object of litigation for years between the late Empress Eugenie and the French government. Prince Victor inherited this litigation with the rest of Eugenie's property, but by the present arrangement it is definitely settled. The sword and clock are now in the Decorative Arts museum.

BANDONED VESSELS SHOW DECAY OF LIFE ON VOLGA

Once Busy River Is Now Scene of Idleness—Resources Abundant, Funds Low.

Astrakhan, Russia.—Life on the far-famed Volga river is slowly ebbing out. The great 2,300-mile yellow stream, once Russia's greatest maritime highway, no longer courses its winding way to the sound of fishermen's songs, the churning of the wheels of great excursion steamers, or the echoing sirens of heavily laden cargo boats. The hundreds of villages which drew their life from the river are melancholy, spiritless places, for the people not only are faced with a wheat famine this year, but their fishing business, which is their chief support, is all but dead.

Where in prewar days the Volga produced two billion pounds of fish and caviar annually, it now yields only one-tenth that quantity. This is no fault of the river, but of the government to exploit it properly. The government at first nationalized the fisheries and, finding that a failure, it restored the fishery enterprises to their original owners. But the owners have found the government taxes too onerous and many of them have abandoned their business altogether. Only 70 of the 800 fisheries which formerly operated at Astrakhan, the great caviar depot, have resumed their activities.

But it is in the striking decrease in the number of excursion and cargo steamers that one notices the most significant change in the Volga. Where previously the river was covered with thousands of commercial and pleasure craft, it now carries only occasional passenger steamers and small cargo boats. In every bend and inlet in the river the visitor sees scores of abandoned excursion steamers slowly sinking to the bottom.

The few passenger vessels still on the river are well-equipped, but they are patronized almost entirely by Russians of the proletarian class, for there are few foreigners in Russia, and members of the old intellectual regime have no money to make such trips.

One of the most pathetic scenes along the whole course of the river are the forests of abandoned fishing boats, whose slender masts, pointed toward the sky like huge fingers, seem to be calling to heaven to witness the death of their ancient and respected industry. Their owners have turned to more lucrative callings.

In the absence of fishermen one sees groups of sailors and longshoremen, who invariably complain of bad times and low wages. Work is difficult to obtain, and the longshoremen therefore are willing to discharge huge cargoes from vessels at the ridiculous rate of a cent for every 100 pounds.

Nature also seems bent on completing the economic doom of the historic river, for everywhere huge beds of moving sand are gathering, which block the river and imperil navigation. The sand-dredges are neither numerous enough nor sufficient to remove all these impediments to river traffic.

81-Year-Old Messenger Boy Saw Lincoln Shot

Henry O. Wolford, aged eighty-one, of Washington, is the oldest telegram delivery "boy" in the United States. For the past four years he has carried messages to practically all of the downtown business concerns of the national capital. Mr. Wolford was in the Ford theater the night President Lincoln was shot.

Jap Colony for Brazil

Tokyo.—A Japanese emigration association operating in Brazil has purchased a tract of about 30,000 acres in Sao Paulo state on which it plans to establish a village of Japanese emigrants, according to a cablegram received here from the company's agent in Brazil. The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

EGGSHELLS

THERE are various superstitions current in this country with regard to eggshells, and all of them can be found existing in a practically similar form in Europe. Most common of our eggshell superstitions are as follows: Burn your eggshells to prevent bad luck: It is bad luck not to break the shell after having eaten a boiled egg; and powdered eggshells are good for the ague.

It is a custom with many people both in Europe and America when they have eaten a boiled egg—eaten it as a boiled egg should be eaten, out of the shell in an egg cup—to put their spoon through the bottom of the shell "for luck." Napoleon III is said never to have omitted this ceremony.

All these modern superstitions come from the ancient belief in a connection between eggshells and witches, which was an old belief when the great Roman naturalist Pliny mentioned it nearly two hundred years ago. According to Pliny eggshells should be broken lest witches and other evil-minded necromancers got hold of them to work magic with. Among the northern nations witches used eggshells which had not been sufficiently shattered as ships in which they sailed across rivers and seas to regions where winds and storms were brewed and where they could be bought for a sufficient consideration to be afterwards dealt with at retail by the weird sisters. In eggshells they used to journey to Lapland where they learned not only the control of winds but much other forbidden lore from the Lapps and the "warlock Finns."

After the discovery of the Western World the witches voyaged much in eggshells to Bermuda, "the storm-vexed Bermoothes," also a region of storms and of magic according to the belief of our forefathers. From all this it will be easily seen why it is well to take the precaution of so breaking your eggshell that no witch can use it for a boat or for purposes of necromancy as indicated by Pliny. The belief that pulverized eggshell is good for the ague comes from a logical train of reasoning. The ancients believed that diseases were infliction from evil spirits or witches. Now, for all you know, your ague may be caused by some witch who has worked magic on you after the manner indicated by Pliny by means of an unshattered eggshell. Now take pulverized eggshell and by sympathetic magic pulverize the spell.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Free Motion Picture Tonight For Members of Boys' Division.

There will be a free motion picture show for the members of the boys' division tonight in the Y. Admission will be by membership ticket only. If a member wishes to bring a friend he may secure a ticket that will admit his friend.

The Hi-Y will hold its first meeting of the new year on Wednesday evening. F. S. Coan will be the speaker of the evening, and will probably conduct the discussion after the meeting. The Hi-Y League will open again with the Peppers vs. and Aces and the Rajahs vs. the Shebbers.

The Pioneers will meet tonight after the motion pictures.

Troop No. 1, B. S. A., will meet tonight after the entertainment.

The membership of the boys' division is the highest today that it has been in the past three years. From a membership of 164 three years ago it has steadily grown until today there are 244 boys on the membership rolls and a large proportion of them joining in more than one phase of the activities.

Oldest Form of Writing

The Egyptian system of writing is perhaps the oldest of the known scripts. This writing was in the form of pictures. The most ancient Egyptian papyrus now known contains accounts of the reign of King Assa ([illegible] B. C.). The earliest literary papyrus is that known for the name of its former owner as the Prisse Papyrus, now preserved in Paris. It contains a work composed in the reign of a king of the fifth dynasty, and is computed to have been written as early as 2500 B. C.

Caddy's Limitations

One day "Fiery" was caddying for a rather persistent golfer, who, after missing a short putt on the ninth green at Muirfield threw his putter into the neighboring potato field to relieve his feelings.

With face unmoved, "Fiery" was walking in the direction of the next tee when the golfer said: "Oh! Fiery, you might go and get my putter."

To this "Fiery" replied: "Ye putt too early, so ye fetch and carry."

Building Burned At County Farm

A two story frame building on the county farm at New Paltz was destroyed by fire last Thursday. The building was located several hundred feet from the main buildings and during construction of the other buildings at the farm it was used by the superintendent. During the smallpox epidemic several years ago it was used as a pest house. Since that time it has been unused and no insurance was carried on it by the county. The New Paltz fire department was summoned as soon as the blaze was discovered but could give little help on account of a frozen fire hydrant.

Re-open Night School Sessions

Monday evening the Kingston Night School re-opened under the supervision of Principal Frank L. Meagher. The school will be in session on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, each week, beginning at 7:15 o'clock.

Classes will be held in bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting and mechanical drawing. Special classes are also held for foreign born, men and women. There will also be given instructions necessary for the obtaining of automobile operators licenses and for the passing of literacy tests for the purpose of becoming voters at the general elections.

Brooklyn Bandit Caught by Victim

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 6.—In a running gun battle last night with a drug store clerk whom he had held up a few minutes before, Robert Aleskowitz, 19, of 1656 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, was captured by his pursuer and turned over to the police.

Henry W. Shoemaker, the clerk, made the capture in a doorway with an empty gun after several shots had been exchanged in an automobile chase. Aleskowitz had one shell left in his revolver but did not use it when he saw he was cornered. Another bandit with him escaped.

Aleskowitz said he had stolen an automobile in Albany and was on his way cross continent.

Murphy Clerk Of Fire Board

At the annual meeting of the board of fire commissioners held at the Central Fire Station Monday evening the board organized for the year by electing Louis H. Kolts, president, and Andrew J. Murphy, clerk. The election of Mr. Murphy, who succeeds Ray Whitbeck as clerk of the board, was unanimous. Mr. Murphy has long been active in local and Hudson river valley firemen's matters. He has been secretary of Cornell Hose Company for over a quarter of a century. For the past ten years he has served as treasurer of the Hudson Valley Volunteer Firemen's Association, and he has been president of the Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association of this city since its organization. Aside from the election of officers, only routine matters were disposed of by the board, which then adjourned.

NOTED CATHOLIC PRELATE DEAD OF HEART ATTACK

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 6.—Right Rev. Henry Moeller, archbishop of the Catholic province which includes Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana, and part of Michigan, who died suddenly late last night, probably will be buried Monday, it was announced this morning. The prelate was 75 years of age.

Archbishop Moeller suffered a heart attack, brought on by grippe, believed to have been caused by his insistence on celebrating on the midnight Mass Christmas in St. Peter's Cathedral here.

Surviving him are his brother, Mon. Bernard Moeller, chancellor of the archdiocese; another brother, the Rev. Ferdinand Moeller, S. J., of St. Louis, and a sister, Helen Marie, of Cincinnati.

Old Ram Discovered Youth Will Be Served

Not long ago the Companion printed a story by Mr. C. A. Stephens entitled "Cephas Tyrannus." The story reminded a reader of an experience that a cousin of his had with a ram that must certainly have been an offspring of old Cephas. The ram was past middle age, was large and heavy and had a wicked set of horns that he used at every opportunity. He became so dangerous that he finally had to be confined by himself in a small enclosure.

My cousin, writes our correspondent, had obtained a younger and smaller ram for breeding purposes, and the sight of the newcomer filled the old ram with deepest hatred. He was never able to get at him, though he often put the enclosure to a severe test when the young ram would come in sight.

The end of the jealousy came suddenly one day when the gate of his pen was inadvertently left open. The old ram gave one angry blat and tore through the opening, making for his enemy, who was feeding with the ewes about 200 yards away. At the snort of defiance the entire herd looked up, and the ewes took to their heels. Not so their new lord, however. He stood his ground, braced all four feet and lowered his head to meet the oncoming rush. As the two collided there was a crash that was heard in the next field. The impact threw the old ram clear over the youngster's back, and like Cephas, when he landed some five feet to the rear, he lay quite still. Examination showed that his neck was broken. The young ram appeared dazed for a moment or two; then he leisurely trotted off to join the ewes at their new feeding place.—Youth's Companion.

Musk Ox Well Equipped to Cope With Enemies

The musk ox which makes its home in the northern part of Canada is a connecting link between wild cattle and sheep. Its horns are similar to the cape buffalo and its flesh tastes like beef. It has next its body a dense coat of soft, clean woolly hair, and through this grows a rain coat of very long, straight brown hair like that of the Tibetan yak, says the Winnipeg Free Press.

It has a tail so short and small that the animal seems tailless. Their horns meet in a broad base over the top of the skull, drop far down, then sharply curve upward for several inches, terminating in sharp points. They are specially designed for puncturing the vitals of wolves and polar bears. The musk ox lives and thrives even up to the farthest north for hoofed animals.

Pretty Legend of Crosses

Near the place where the Blue Ridge and the Allegheny mountains unite there is, in Patrick county, Va., a spur of the Blue Ridge called "Bull mountain." On the side of this mountain, and nowhere else in the world, there are found the famous "fairy stones." The mountaineers explain it by legends worthy of the myth-making Greeks. One story says "that ages ago, when the red men were masters here, these stones were showered down by the Great Spirit as a sign of salvation coming to the savage race." But the generally accepted legend—that one from which the name comes—is this: "When Christ was crucified on Calvary elfin messengers carried the news to all parts of the world. When the tidings of woe reached the fairies in the rugged mountains they ceased their merrymaking and at once began to make these crosses as mementos of the sad event."

Peacock and Turkey

"Look at me," said the peacock, spreading his tail and strutting grandly about; "am I not handsome?"

"Yes," replied the turkey, "in your own eyes, but I put up a perpetual thanksgiving that I was not hatched so vain as you."

"I should think thanksgiving was rather a tender subject with you," rejoined the peacock, pluming himself.

"Not at all," said the farmer, who had been listening to this interchange of civilities; "he is a tender subject for Thanksgiving!" And so saying he caught up the turkey and carried him off to market.

"Well, well," said the peacock, "I'm glad I'm too handsome to eat, and that fine feathers don't always make fine birds, according to the cook."—St. Nicholas Magazine.

Horticultural News

NEGLECTED ORCHARD NOT HARD TO RENEW

Demonstrations with old, neglected orchards in western North Carolina made by the division of horticulture have shown that these properties can be renewed and be made to pay a good return. H. R. Niswonger, extension horticulturist, working in this section finds that many home orchards are rapidly disappearing while others planted for commercial purposes have so deteriorated that they hardly bear enough fruit for the family table. Many of these orchards cease to bear fruit because of a lack of soil fertility, while others often bloom but the fruit falls before ripening because of insects and diseases.

A demonstration made on the farm of W. W. Walker in Henderson county, shows a good margin of profit for the work done in his orchard. Thirty-five trees about twenty years of age made up of the Winesap, Stark, Ben Davis and Gravestein varieties were used in this demonstration. The orchard had received some attention in the past, had been sprayed several times, but the other phases of orchard management had been neglected.

Last winter a complete program of orchard management was put on in this orchard. The trees were pruned, sprayed, and fertilized according to the methods advocated by the horticultural workers. The sod was plowed under and a dust mulch provided until early summer when the ground was sowed to soybeans, these turned under in the fall and the land put back to a winter cover of rye.

Three trees of the 35 were used as checks and were not treated. From them only one-half of a peck of cull apples was received, while the remaining 32 trees produced 175 bushels of good marketable fruit that sold for an average of $2.50 per bushel at the orchard.

The financial record shows that the cost of the work was $45; the return from the apples was $437.50, leaving a net return to the owner of $392.50 as payment for his attention. Had he not cared for these trees he would have made nothing, as shown by the three check trees.

Safe Plan to Prune All Fruit Trees in Winter

A safe time to prune all plants, especially fruit trees, is in winter when life is dormant. Complete the work before the sap starts in spring. Finish pruning before applying dormant spray.

Experienced fruit growers avoid too much or too little pruning. They leave at least three or four times as many fruit spurs as they expect to bear, so as to allow for irregular fruiting. No two trees or varieties will take quite the same pruning. The problem is different with young trees than with old. If all the fruit spurs are left on when the tree is young, the fruit wood extends further out on the main limbs where it is less easily thinned, sprayed or cropped. Evidently the Baldwin tree was thus neglected in its youth, while the Northern Spy was well pruned when young.

In pruning apple, peach or pear, first cut out suckers. Remove the less important limbs that have a tendency to crowd closed the head of the tree and to exclude sun and air. For the growth of large, luscious and highly-colored fruit, sunshine is all-important. Fungus pests, are fostered where foliage excludes sun. Cover with a good oil paint the surface where large limbs are cut off to exclude air and prevent decay. Be careful not to let the paint cover the surrounding bark as it will kill the bark, preventing new growth over wound.

Farmers Urged to Grow Small Fruits for Family

The home orchard is being sadly neglected, despite the many good reasons why it should not be, say fruit men at the New York State Agricultural college. If for no other reasons, the healthfulness of fruit in the diet is enough to justify the care bestowed upon the orchard. At this time, when everything purchased comes high and the farmer wishes to cut down expenses, a home supply of fruit will not only be healthful but economical.

In those sections where the home orchard has been a discouraging problem attention might be directed to small fruits. An ample variety will fulfill almost any individual need. For the typical family, the small fruits, such as strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, dewberries, currants, gooseberries and grapes, will make the greatest appeal not only because they require less space and come into bearing early, but spraying and other cultural methods are more simple than for orchard fruits.

Topwork Unsatisfactory Trees Early in Spring

Are there any trees in your orchard of unsatisfactory variety? It will be possible for you to topwork such trees early in the spring to any variety of that fruit you wish if you prepare your cions in time. This part of your work should be done now.

Select cions of the desired sorts, choosing one-year-old wood—that is, wood which grew during the past season. Carefully pack the cions away in moderately moist sand.

"Silver" Foxes

The name silver fox, as commonly used by furriers, includes the dark phases of the ordinary red fox, variously called silver gray, silver black, or black. The color of the red fox of the Northeastern states and of its allies of the colder part of North America varies from red to black, and these extremes with the gradations between them form four more or less distinct phases, known respectively as red, cross or patch, silver and black.

Nurmi in Two Races Tonight

Olympic Wonder Will Meet America's Best at Garden Meet—Records May Be Broken In Event.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 6.—Paavo Nurmi, featuring the finest set of running legs in the history of athletics, will display his flying shanks before the American public for the first time tonight at Madison Square Garden in what has been termed "the race of the century." Just what race is referred to is not made clear. Nurmi will go to the post in two races, a mile and a five thousand meter event, and in each he will take on the greatest runners this side of the Atlantic.

He will be a lone Finn against the flower of America's athletic colony, yet the man who won four races at the Paris Olympics will have the crowd with him. The pro-Nurmi sentiment has been festered not only on account of his great ability but because the cards seem stacked against him. He will find the board floor tracks just as difficult to negotiate as did Joseph Guillemot, the Frenchman, several years ago.

He will also find Willie Ritola, a fellow countryman, waiting for the gun in the 5,000 metre race but not with the extended hand of friendship. The compatriots are bitter enemies.

On form alone Nurmi would be an odd-on favorite to win both events. But with the existing conditions the critics give Ritola better than an outside chance to defeat Nurmi at 5,000 metres and also look for the rejuvenated Joie Ray to give the Finn the race of his life at the mile. Jimmy Connolly, Lloyd Hahn, Walter Higgins, Leo Larrivee, and Lewendahl, a second rate field, make up the rest of the field in this race.

Nurmi has been declared to be in excellent shape for his American debut and has requested that special timers be placed at 1,500 metres and three miles during the two races. This indicates that he hopes to break no less than four records during the evening.

Ray informed friends in this city that he considered himself about a week short of top form but was ready for the gun. Connolly stepped a mile in 4:19 less than a week ago with Higgins at his heels. Records seem ordained in both events.

Paterson Plays Here Wednesday

Kingston, Metropolitan League champions for the first half, in quest for a victory in the second half, is due to meet more than passive resistance if the remaining teams in the league hit their stride. Paterson is one of the teams that finished lowly the first half, but this period it is expected to make a much more creditable showing.

Wednesday evening the Paterson club appears here to try and take a fall out of the locals. Borgman and company are out to beat the local representatives this period and a fast game should result. To face the Paterson outfit, Manager Morgenweck may place on the court a much changed line-up.

Koenig's Shots Give Saints Win

St. Peter's Won Thrilling Game from Poughkeepsie Lyceums—Juniors Beat St. Joseph's.

The Poughkeepsie Lyceum quintet and the St. Peter's Lyceum squad battled Monday evening at the St. St. Peter's court, in one of the most interesting games ever staged here. The final score was in favor of the local Saints, 36 to 30.

The work of Joe Koenig, the fast forward on the Saints, was in a great part responsible for the Saints' win. Koenig scored a total of 19 points, 8 fields and 3 fouls. Koenig's shooting kept the locals in striking distance and eventually at the head.

In the first half period, the visitors walked off the floor with a lead of five points, score 19 to 14. Sullivan and Kaman did the best shooting for the losers, each getting 9 points.

In the last half session some pretty playing was called for on the part of the local Saints to overcome the lead held by the fast quintet from the Bridge City. During the last half period the splendid defense work of the Saints kept the Lyceums in check. The score:

May Suspend Kelly and Bohne

Baseball Players in Recent Scandal Get Into Trouble Associating With O'Connell on Basketball Team—Fans Getting Up Petition.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 6.—The O'Connell-Dolan skeleton in baseball's closet was playing castanets with its knee caps today as a result of the action of George Kelly and Sammy Bohne, of the Giants and Reds, respectively, in attempting to team up with the discredited Jimmy O'Connell on a Pacific coast basketball team.

The action indicated all is not eau de cologne in Denmark and crystallized sentiment in favor of Judge Landis making public the complete testimony in baseball's latest scandal, something he has declined to do to date.

Several minor leaguers were involved in the venture but that is of slight consequence. Neither is the fact that an attempt was made to evade the issue by having Kelly and O'Connell play alternate games nor that O'Connell subsequently was let out by the coast management in order to save Kelly further embarrassment.

The thing that has smote the public right between the eyebrows is that Kelly was one of three players absolved of complicity in the O'Connell business and that some 15 months ago Bohne was called up to explain a story that appeared in a Chicago publication, charging him with attempted game-jugglery at the behest of gamblers. Pat Duncan also was involved in the charges. He has been wafted out of the major leagues in the last month or so for reasons not altogether clear.

These are the men who planned to identify themselves with what John A. Heydler terms "a self confessed faker." If John has his way both will suffer suspension, even though it was only the spirit and not the letter of baseball's dignity that was flouted. But the end is not yet.

Only a few hours before this latest development of the scandal was aired, a local newspaper had started a campaign by which it was hoped the fans would force Landis's hand in the matter of the O'Connell-Dolan testimony. The publication in question is printing a petition to the judge, to be signed by fans who wish to know more about the matter. The petition reads in part:

"As a baseball fan who supports the game at the box office, I feel that I am entitled to all the evidence you may have discovered in the Dolan-O'Connell bribery scandal. I realize that you may be withholding some of the evidence in order to further your investigations into the matter but believe that the time has come when all the testimony pertaining to the scandal should be laid before the public."

Those behind the campaign frankly state that they expect to obtain 100,000 signatures, no less, to the petition.

It may or may not, however, have an effect on Landis's policy of dignified silence, the judge being a man of granite, right or wrong. But it would seem to indicate the temper of the public, provided that uncertain medium of sentiment responds in the manner expected.

If the public does respond, it will indicate that it is far from satisfied that Judge Landis was justified in blacklisting Dolan on O'Connell's testimony and giving absolution to Kelly, Frank Frisch and Ross Young, charged by the same man with having guilty knowledge of the attempted bribery.

"Chick" Meehan To Succeed Thorp

Definite Report in Circulation Says Syracuse Coach Received a Three-Year Contract From New York University.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 6.—Although John F. "Chick" Meehan, Syracuse football coach, is said to have been in receipt of offers from Nebraska and Southehrn California, a definite report was in circulation today that he had accepted the offer of New York University and had even gone so far as to lease a house for his family on University Heights, this city.

The report stated that Meehan had signed a contract, tendered by Henry C. Hathaway, chairman of the Athletic Council at New York University, last Wednesday afternoon, following the meeting of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. It was said that the official announcement of the transaction was being withheld for diplomatic reasons.

Meehan, it is said, received a three-year contract and will move his family to 2045 University avenue on January 15, when he will take over his new duties. Notification to this effect is said to have been wired Harry Stuhldreher, All-American quarterback at Notre Dame, and other candidates for the post, made vacant by the resignation of Tom Thorp.

WEST PARK.

West Park, Jan. 6.—Herbert Gindrat left on Monday morning for a business trip to Schenectady, Saratoga Springs, Amsterdam and other cities in the central part of the state.

Mrs. Carrie Gindrat leaves early in the week for a few day's visit with her sister, Mrs. Hurst, at Haworth, N. J.

Miss Grace Freer, Miss Viva Freer and Daniel Freer of Esopus were in Walden on Saturday attending the funeral of Mrs. John Griffiths.

Mrs. Albert Schriver of Milton, is spending the winter with her mother, Mrs. Alice Dumont, while her husband is engaged at the Saltford greenhouses in Poughkeepsie.

RIXEY ONE OF MOST UNIQUE CHARACTERS

Tall Virginian Pitches His Twelfth Year in Majors.

Eppa Rixey closed his twelfth year as a pitcher in major league company with a record of 15 games won for the season. Not so grand, you say? No, and yet not so bad. The veteran won 15 out of 29 games, a pretty good record for anybody's pitcher, especially with a club that did not finish one, two, three in the pennant standing. When one considers that the average major league life of a pitcher is less than ten years and his full bloom of effectiveness is five years or less, the 1924 record of the tall Cincinnati pitcher is rather impressive. And especially is this record impressive when one considers what Rixey did for his team in 1923.

Pitching his eleventh big-league year, the Virginian won 20 and lost 15 games. This feat was somewhat overshadowed by the marvelous record of Luque, who pitched on the same team that year with Rixey and led all pitchers in the world by his performance of 27 victories and only 8 defeats.

Rixey really had one of his great years in 1923, and considering the strain on his ancient arm while compiling that record, his 1924 showing of 15 victories is an impressive one. It is shown here that Rixey, with his 20 victories in 1923 was six years past his full pitching bloom. The percentage of big-league pitchers who win 20 games after their tenth year on the big time is mighty small. Possibly not more than a dozen such pitching giants appear in the majors during a decade.

Rixey himself is just as impressive as his pitching averages. He is the tallest man in baseball, standing six feet five inches in height, and he is also the slenderest man in baseball. An impressive figure is Rixey when he bends forward from the hips to deliver his curves. In spite of his height, he fields his position with precision and skill. Rixey is also one of the smartest of the ball players. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia, coming straight to Philadelphia in the National league after three years on the mound for his college. But when it comes to disposition, Rixey leads them all, either in baseball or any other walk of life. He has the best disposition on record. Anyone who has spent a day with the tall pitcher around the clubhouse, on the bench, on the practice field, or in the hotel lobby; under any kind of weather conditions, playing conditions or state of the pennant race, or harassment that falls to the lot of the children of man, Rixey is always smiling, pleasant, cheerful, jesting, not only refusing to let his own troubles worry him but driving away the troubles of those with whom he comes in contact.

A remarkable type, this man Rixey. His value to his club in the matter of disposition would seem to be worth about as much as his pitching ability. It is simply impossible to withstand his pleasant smile, his sense of humor and his happy, boyish ways. Twelve years of campaigning in clubhouse and on field have left no visible marks upon this veteran's character. He is just as light-hearted and as gay and as full of enthusiasm as the last-joined recruit. But let us understand Rixey. Under this smiling exterior and this prankishness, this apparent unsophistication of the rookie, lieth a strong, manly and dependable character. Rixey is a man of superior intelligence, a man of thought and study, who besides having mastered the profession of baseball, has also mastered the profession of dentistry. But he elects to look on the gay side of life and to get every speck of joy and brightness and humor that he can out of any situation that arises in his most interesting and colorful existence.

Nervy Skippy Stivers

Above is [illegible] Vernon "Skippy" Stivers, star back of the University of Idaho football team. In the first game of the season Stivers was injured, suffering partial paralysis resulting from a broken collarbone. "Skippy" was partly "repaired" and played throughout the season. When the last game had been played, it was made known that "Skippy" had played with a broken collarbone, keeping the extent of the injury a secret so as to sustain the fighting spirit of the team, of which he was the outstanding figure.

Opals and the Hair

Beautiful blond maidens of the Middle Ages valued nothing more highly than a necklace of opals. Wearing of these ornaments was supposed to keep their hair from losing its wonderful color.

ELLENVILLE

Ellenville, Jan. 6.—At the evening service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Sunday evening, a very interesting stereopticon address on "Famine Prevention was given by the pastor, the Rev. C. A. Dann.

Mrs. Thomas Namack from New York city, accompanied by her son, Thomas Jr., from Georgetown University spent several days last week at the Low home, West End.

Lawyer Clarence A. Hoornbeck and Bert H. Terwilliger of the Terwilliger Agency are planning to leave Ellenville, January 15th, for Florida to spend a month or so.

Mr. and Mrs. Deyo W. Johnson entertained the members of their club on New Year's night.

H. J. Levine, manager of the Jewish Agricultural Society with Mrs. Levine, and little daughter, Helen are spending some time in New York city.

Mrs. Albert Ciebert is reported very ill.

Decorator R. A. Dann, while in Albany to report the doings of the Shriners last Friday, had a bad fall on the slippery pavement and severely bruised and sprained his right arm, fortunately escaping without breaking any bones.

Philip J. Hauck of Brooklyn spent the week-end at the Johnson home on Bloomer street and Clarence Lepke of Brooklyn spent the holidays at the home of his parents at Ulster Heights.

Deyo W. Johnson of Ellenville is among newly appointed notaries public.

Charles A. Dann, Jr., was sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to reach home Tuesday morning from Oberlin, Ohio. He returned to that city on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Hartwig have gone to spend a week or so at the home of their daughter, Mrs. H. D. Frost, on Staten Island.

C. Guy Ver Nooy accompanied by several friends from Oberlin College, left Ellenville Friday evening in a "Flivver" and arrived in Oberlin without any mishaps at about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

St. Mary's Church will hold a supper, card party and reception at Hunt Memorial on January 28.

Lawyer Manuel Dittenheimer expected to take possession of his new office, the office formerly of John R. DeVany on Friday, January 2. He will keep his office at Mountaindale with an assistant in charge.

Otto Johnson, Jr., Miss Margaret Mengel, H. J. Arnold of Brooklyn, and Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Johnson and little daughter, Betty, of Port Jervis spent New Year's Day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Johnson on Bloomer street.

A sauerkraut supper will be held in the annex of the Lutheran Church on Thursday evening, January 15.

A unique Christmas celebration was held by the Pythian Sisters December 29. A large number were present and a most delightful evening was spent. The retiring officers presented the most excellent chief, Miss Anne M. Schaffer, with a beautiful present in appreciation of her untiring and praiseworthy services as chief. Refreshments were served. The regular monthly meeting of the Pythian Sisters will be held on Thursday evening, January 8, at 8 o'clock. Initiation and covered dish social.

The Girl Scouts of the Reformed Church had a jolly Christmas celebration at the home of their captain, Miss Mildred Eaton, on Saturday afternoon. Not a member was absent and Christmas fun was in order. Games were played, marshmallows toasted and simple gifts exchanged. A pretty Christmas tree also lent its glitter to the occasion. The hostess served ice cream and cake and then the season's greetings were exchanged. The troop consists of Hester Craft, Jessie Craft, Leiah Lewis, Katherine Meyer, Katherine Burhans, Ella Krom, Martha Carson and Marjorie Langabeer.

Daniel Albert of Fordham University, spent several days at home.

John M. Meier has returned home after spending about a month in Syracuse.

Miss Helen Campbell from the Philadelphia College of Medicine and Editor Richmond Campbell from Middletown, spent the holidays at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Sherry of East Orange, spent the holiday at the Sherry home on Center street.

George Rose from Albany, Emmons Gray from Buffalo and Percy Terwilliger from New York, spent the holidays at home.

Mrs. Ethel Gilleran Eagon and little son from Elmira, and John Gilleran from Fordham College, and Miss Loretta Gilleran from Elmira spent the holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James G. Gilleran.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Coffin from New York and Miss Ella DeVany spent Christmas at the DeVany home.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley E. Heaton from Albany, spent the holidays at the Parsell's home on Park street. Miss Betty Rapp accompanied her mother on her return to Albany.

Dr. and Mrs. James K. Hoornbeck spent the holiday time at home.

WALKER FAVORED TO WIN POPULAR VERDICT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 6.—Mickey Walker and Mike McTigue, respective holders of the world's welterweight and light-heavyweight titles, will today complete training for their 12 round, no decision bout at the National Sportsmen's Club, Newark, tomorrow night. McTigue's title will hang in the balance, in that Walker can take over the championship by scoring a knockout or winning on a foul.

Walker is a top heavy favorite to win the popular decision, in spite of the difference in the weight of the two men.
